France In Chaos As 2nd Cabinet Falls In 4 Days

2 Votes Oust Bouisson in Chamber Over Money Crisis.

Senate President To Get Premier Bid

Laval Refuses Call to Form New Ministry; Riot Quelled.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, (Wednesday), June 5.—France was thrown into political chaos for the second time within a week today, following the abrupt overthrow of Premier Fernand Bouisson in the Chamber of Deputies last night on his "save the franc" dictatorship policy.

President Ilbert LeBrun accepted Bouisson's resignation when the Chamber, on a close vote, overthrew him on a margin of two ballots, following a roll-call recount.

He sought in vain to persuade Bouisson to resume the task of forming another cabinet. Consultations at the palace with retiring Foreign Minister, Pierre Laval likewise failed. Laval rejected the premiership.

Bouisson, rejecting the task a second time, suggested the president offer it to 71year-old, bearded Jean Jeanneney, president of the Senate, and LeBrun announced at 12:10 a. m. he would do so at 9 a. m. today. He ended his fruitless political consultations shortly after midnight, turning to Jeanneney as his next prospect.

Replaced LeBrun in Senate.

Senator Jeanneney, elderly Savoy mountaineer, replaced Lebrun as head of the Senate when the latter was elected President and resigned his seat.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Paris reported Jeanneney was unlikely to accept, a she was in line for the Presidency of France, and that Laval might be urged to reconsider.—Editor's note.]

Jeanneney has been in the Senate since 1909 and in the past has modestly declined dozens of cabinet posts. He underwent an operation a year ago and has been in poor health since. Hence friends expected, due to this and his age, as well as the tremendous task facing any new ministry, he would refuse in the morning, leaving the nation without a ministry in the face of its financial and economic crisis.

Asked to Rule by Decree.

The downfall of the Bouisson cabinet came on a vote of confidence demand by the premier on his program to rule by decree through next October 31. The ballot on a recount was 264 to 262.

The original count showed a slight margin in favor of the government and Bouisson, and his ministers believed temporarily that they had survived the crisis which overthrew former Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin only last Friday.

However, left-wing deputies clamored for a "pointage," or a check of the votes against the roll of members in the chamber, because of the closeness of the original count.

This was done while Bouisson and his ministers awaited their fate silently. The recount ended at 8:18 p. m., showing the cabinet had lost by two votes.

Official Poll Differs.

Official records of the chamber later showed rectification of the ballots after the official roll count gave Bouisson a majority of 12 votes. However, rectifications enter the records but have no influence on a roll call, which remains the chamber's formal action—in this case overthrow of the Bouisson four-day-old ministry.

Laval and others used these "rectifications" giving Bouisson a technical majority of 12 votes as a most important argument for his return—but he refused, insisting the leftist parties who had promised in part at least to support him had failed, and his work was futile.

Hundreds of Nationalists held a violent street demonstration while the cabinet was being overthrown in the chamber. They gathered near the Place de la Opera. Five hundred police broke up the demonstration, arresting ringleaders.

Bouisson Turns Pale.

Bouisson had hoped that the presence of Joseph Caillaux as the "strong man" and finance minister in his cabinet would overcome the radical Communist and Socialist opposition to the dictatorial issue involved.

The left wing benches refused, however, sticking to their slogan in "defense of our republican regime."

Caillaux and Bouisson stood for stanch defense of the franc at its present parity, on their cherished gold standard. Caillaux had just announced in the Chamber he

Holding Firm Curb Opposed In the Senate

Bill Held Unconstitutional; Showdown to Come Later in Week.

The Holding Bill.

The bill to abolish utility holding companies was under heavy fire in the Senate yesterday. A move to have the bill rewritten in committee was begun.

At the same time, Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Edison Electric Institute, called on the power industry "to fight for its life." He addressed the institute's convention in Atlantic City.

By the Associated Press.

Attacks from both sides of the Senate chamber converged yesterday on the bill to abolish public utility holding companies.

The drive to have the bill rewritten in committee before passage was started by Senator Dieterich, (Democrat), Illinois, and followed by Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, both of whom branded it as unconstitutional and unnecessary.

Their speeches, and a prospect of others, including an exhaustive reply by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, indicated the debate would continue late into the week before reaching a showdown.

While several Senators indicated a desire to send the bill back to committee for re-writing, Wheeler renewed his insistence that it would pass essentially unchanged.

Deny Concern for Private Interests.

Both the assailants of the measure denied they were motivated by concern solely for the power industry and expressed resentment at such intimations by Wheeler and others.

Evidently irritated by the remarks in debate earlier in the week, Senator Dietrich declined for the most part to permit Wheeler to question him, and coursed through his address virtually without interruption.

He said the bill proposed "the most tyrannical, unreasonable and lawless rules that could possibly be enacted," and left to the "whim" of the Securities and Exchange Commission much of the determi-

Ransom Bill Found; Break Believed Due

$20 Note Passed in Far West to Buy Ticket to Salt Lake City.

Vital Developments in Case Are Expected in 48 Hours.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 4.—The trail of George Weyerhaeuser's $200,000 kidnapers warmed tonight with discovery of the passing of the first ransom bill in eastern Oregon, and the statement of a Justice Department spokesman that the case will "break wide open in 48 hours."

The assertion concerning the "break" came a short time after the first ransom bill in the kidnaping was brought to light, and all the cunning of the Justice Department's criminal hunters had been thrown into a search for the suspect.

"This case will break wide open in 48 hours," the spokesman said. "The ransom money is loose now."

He added his belief "a local gang—by that I mean Seattle and Tacoma men—was responsible."

No hint was given as to who was suspected, but there have been definite indications the last few days the kidnaping had been laid at the door of Pacific Northwest criminals.

All Details Sought.

Justice Department headquarters here was intensely interested concerning the ransom note passed Sunday night in Huntington, Oreg., and asked for "all you've got" when given information about it.

Reports another ransom bill had been passed today at Blaine, Wash., were denied by Deputy Sheriff Syd Stewart, who said the money in question was not one of the "hot" notes.

Huntington is midway between Baker, Oreg., and the Oregon-Idaho line, some distance south of the Umatilla country, where a speeding sedan and a low-flying unidentified airplane aroused authorities Saturday night and Sunday with reports one or more of the kidnapers might be in that area.

Guards were placed on all northeastern Oregon highways, but without result.

Spotting of the $20 ransom bill was confirmed late today by the Portland (Oreg.) bank to which it was remitted to be held for Federal agents.

T. C. Hunter, Union Pacific agent in charge at the Huntington station, told the Associated Press the bill, No. L-12129816-A, had been taken by telegraph operator C. E. Hannon from a man who wanted a ticket on the train leaving there for Salt Lake City at 10:10 p. m. Sunday.

Describes Passer.

Hannon said the man was about 30 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall, smooth shaven, dressed in a tan suit and brown hat.

A police broadcast Sunday described one of the alleged kidnapers as "possibly a Greek or Macedonia, 35 or 40, 5 feet 11 inches, or 6 feet, 165 pounds; hair, eyebrows and complexion dark. Slender build, smooth shaven, noticeable lines about mouth. Wore gray felt hat and gray suit."

The other two in the police broadcast were described as older men, one 5 feet 10 inches tall and the other 5 feet 9.

The hour when the railroad ticket was purchased approximated that at which Oregon officers called off an intensive search for the tan automobile on the theory it had slipped through the immediate net set to trap it.

Little George Weyerhaeuser returned Saturday to his home here, nearly eight days from the time he was "snatched" returning home from school.

George enjoyed a day of play with his older brother and sister today while authorities revealed they were placing hope of tracking down the kidnap gang with his aid.

The curly-haired lad played about the big white house and its yard today with his sister, Ann, 13, and his brother Philip, 10.

Realty Inquiry Hears Demand To Prosecute

Sabath Brands Wardman Refinancing as 'Frauds'; Stanley Dismissed.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Criminal prosecution of those responsible for vast losses of investors in refinanced Washington properties of Harry Wardman, builder, was demanded yesterday by a House committee.

Chairman Sabath of a sub-committee investigating mortgage refinancing ordered committee counsel to submit to Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, all evidence produced during the inquiry.

The chairman said the prosecuting attorney should be requested to "proceed as speedily as possible to bring to justice any one who is guilty of any fraud."

Sabath charged that at least a dozen other "such institutions" as Halsey-Stuart & Co., which figured in refinancing the Wardman holdings, employed "the same tactics" to obtain control of "properties worth millions and millions."

Transactions figuring in the Wardman refinancing were described by Sabath as "a continuing fraud" on which the statute of limitations had not run to prevent prosecution.

Tells of Collapse.

Other high points in the hearing came when Wardman himself told of the collapse of his $30,000,000 business and when the committee refused to hear a statement by Leonard L. Stanley, former Halsey-Stuart & Co. vice president, after he declined to waive immunity for criminal prosecution.

The short, nervous Wardman gesticulated frantically as he offered to take over the management of the skyscrapers which constituted his former real estate empire "without any pay" so he could prove his argument that the properties, properly managed, would yield revenue of 4 per cent or more to the bondholders.

"When the bonds went down to 40," Wardman shouted, "I told them (Halsey-Stuart & Co.) to put me in there and watch the bonds go up to 100. They didn't do it. Put me in there tomorrow morning and the bonds will go up 10 points."

Sabath explained the committee

Patmanites Drop Bonus Till Winter

Inflation Bill Backers to Campaign for Adoption Next Session.

Two Other Attempts for Milder Legislation Will Be Made.

By Robert C. Albright.

Bonus legislation of an inflationary type was definitely removed as a threat to the Administration program as the Patman bonus forces, their strength sapped by a presidential veto, withdrew from the field.

Decision to drop the $2,200,000,000 bonus expansion plan for this session, but to renew the campaign for enactment next January, came at a conference of Patman leaders of both houses. The issue thus was projected into the 1936 presidential campaign.

A man-to-man canvass of voting strength in House and Senate precipitated the withdrawal. The Patmanites claim 75 per cent of the votes in Congress, but concede they lack two-thirds of the Senate.

Thomas May Fight On.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, who led the Patman army up the hill and down again, may continue his drive to put new money in circulation, but he will not use the bonus as a medium.

"Our survey shows that if a bonus bill were enacted this session, the veterans would have to make a sacrifice," said Thomas. "So we will take the Patman bill back to the country and seek readoption next January. Our campaign begins today."

Senator Thomas spoke for the Patman inflationists, but not for the whole bonus bloc. At least two other efforts may be made to enact bonus legislation of a milder character, it was learned.

1. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, despite the Patman group's action, at the first opportunity, will offer his three-way compromise, providing payment through a bond issue through new currency, or with work relief money.

2. Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, author of the noninflationary Vinson bill, which would leave financing of bonus payment up to the Treasury, said he may revive his bill if a favorable opening presents itself.

Retreat Forced by Veto.

Generally speaking, however, the President's veto of the Patman bill, and his personal message backing it up, has forced a retreat by the bonus forces. Even the Harrison compromise, providing partial payoff in bonds and cash, and which the President reputedly would sign, was conceded little chance of revival.

Besides Senator Thomas, attending yesterday's Patman strategy conference were Senators William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho; Pat McCarran, Nevada; Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina; George McGill, Kansas (Democrats); Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, author of the bill, and other House members.

"We have no assurance that any other plan would get as many votes," Patman, who reluctantly consented to the temporary surrender, told reporters.

In abandoning the Patman bill as a present session issue, Senator Thomas announced he would drive for monetary expansion on other frontiers. He will call a meeting of the Senate inflation bloc within a few days, he said.

President Drops NRA; Retains Skeleton Staff For Research in Trade

No Effort Will Be Made to Salvage Codes, He Decides.

New Laws Planned On 4 Sub-Agencies

Provisions of Rules to Be Kept Only on U.S. Purchases.

The Text of the White House statement, page 3.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt, in effect, yesterday announced he had abandoned the idea, at least for the next few months, of seeking legislation to validate NRA codes for any part of business or industry.

Instead, the President said, he has asked congressional leaders to adopt an amended Clark resolution continuing until April 1 a somewhat smaller NRA organization to serve as a research body engaged in summarizing results of code enforcement and determining the effect on employers and employes of abandonment of code requirements.

This skeleton NRA organization also will be charged with the duty of determining whether contractors and industries doing business with the Government observe wage and working condition requirements, similar to those contained in the obsolete codes, which henceforth will be placed on all work done for the Government.

Day of Conferences.

The President's announcement that he would seek continuance of NRA only as a research body, without making any effort to revitalize the rules struck down by the Supreme Court decision in the Schechter case, came like the explosion of a bombshell at a special press conference held yesterday after Mr. Roosevelt had spent the day conferring with administrative aids and congressional leaders.

Although there is reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt had determined on this step as long as a week ago, his announcement caused general amazement and, apparently, at first its implications were not fully understood. He left the usual New Deal critics on Capitol Hill speechless for some time, and casting about for some point to attack.

Throughout the day there had been reports that the President would seek to breathe new life into NRA codes, by some means or another. It was reported he would seek to renew the codes at least to govern interstate industry and that an effort would be made to bring a large part of heavy manufacturing under that definition.

The President, however, demonstrated that he was determined not to change the views he expressed Friday that the Supreme Court decision had stripped the Federal Government of jurisdiction over business and industry. Consequently, the implication of yesterday's announcement was that he saw no reason for making further legislative experiments.

Back to Individualism.

In effect the President stated that, as far as the New Deal was concerned, the country could go back to the rugged individualism which marked its industrial relations prior to his inauguration, but that a set of books would be kept to record the results until next April 1. To

'Only the President's Wife,' Protests France's First Lady

Crowded Hours Fill Mme. Lebrun's Visit to Capital; Normandie Passenger Describes Washington as 'Charming.'

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Within two hours after her arrival in Washington yesterday, Mme. Albert Lebrun, wife of the President of France, yielded to one of the Capital's most widespread customs—the press conference. In her native France, Mme. Lebrun has never given an interview, much less granted a press conference.

"There I am nothing officially," she explained as she sat rather stiffly on the edge of a divan at the French Embassy with Mme. Laboulaye, wife of the French Ambassador, by her side. "In France I am only the wife of the President."

Learning that what she termed her "poor English" was readily understandable, the small, pink-cheeked First Lady of France seemed more at ease. Soon she was smiling and answering questions as easily as if she held a press conference every week.

Sails for Home Friday.

Washington she described as "charming;" said she wished she might spend at least ten days in the United States. But when the Normandie sails for France on Friday, Mme. Lebrun will be aboard. She came over on the same boat. If it hadn't been for the Normandie, she probably would not have come to this country.

"I came over on the maiden voyage because the Normandie is my godchild," she said. She went on to explain that in addition to the largest ship in the world she has another godchild—a three-year-old cousin, Colette Richard.

Mme. Lebrun declared the entry into the Hudson River was the most thrilling experience of the entire trip. New York, she repeated several times, was "curious." To her

Reich Program To Boost Navy Given England

Draft of Fleet 35 Per Cent of Britain's Offered at London Parley.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 4.—Adolf Hitler's special naval delegation laid before the British Government today the preliminary draft of Hitler's program for building Germany's navy to 85 per cent the size of the French and 35 per cent of England's.

This would bring the Reich's fleet up to an estimated 400,000 tons, but it was understood the British conferees would try to pare the figure.

The British fleet in home waters will total only 351,000 tons, it was pointed out, even with the increases proposed after the Jubilee review of the fleet next month.

It was authoritatively reported the German delegation, headed by Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's

Mayor of N. Y. To Run Again

LaGuardia Will Seek Re-election as Democrat, Newspaper Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—The Daily News in a coyprighted article says Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, former Republican elected on a Fusion ticket, will run for re-election as a Democrat in the 1937 primaries with the support of the national Administration.

President Roosevelt himself is credited with inducing the mayor to change his mind about retiring and to seek another term on the issue of lower electricity and gas rates.

The move is represented as being aimed directly at Tammany Hall and designed to win Fusion support for the President next year so that any Tammany defections would not be felt. Mayor LaGuardia is known to feel that the place to beat Tammany is within the Democratic primary.

Relations between the national Administration and the wigwam, presumably good since James J. Dooling assumed its leadership, are said by the paper to have cooled again because of patronage disappointments to the point where Tammany is asking no favors from Washington.

Green Seized in Child Assault As Victim Clings to His Hand

D. C. Detective Nabs Brutality Suspect During Stroll; Taken to Maryland for Trial; Girl's Mother Also Held.

Robert A. Green, 26, of Ardmore, Md., under indictment for assault with intent to kill his small stepdaughter, Norma Jean, was arrested yesterday afternoon as he walked along Tenth street northeast, the little girl clinging fondly to his hand.

Police had sought Green since April 9 when the Hyattsville Rescue Squad rushed the 3-year-old child to Casualty Hospital, suffering from wounds allegedly inflicted by her father when she failed to spell a simple word correctly. Posses had hunted him in the woods near his Ardmore, Md., home and there had been angry murmuring by excited citizens. When police started to take the stepfather away yesterday, the little girl wept and clung to him, demanding that they not be separated.

The two were spotted on the street by Detective Sergt. Frank "Hawkeye" Alligood, who was riding in an auto squad cruiser. He drove alongside the couple as the father was about to turn into an ice cream parlor.

He called to Green, who responded to his name. The detective asked him how "that Maryland affair" had turned out, and Green, not recognizing the detective, is alleged to have replied:

"It's never been straightened out. I'm fixing to leave town."

Green was then placed under arrest and taken to police headquarters.

There he told detectives he had been in New York, that he had affected a family reconciliation, and had come back to Washington to get the child. They had been staying at a house in the 800 block of A street, not far from where the arrest took place, he said.

When the stepfather was separated from the child she sobbed for her "daddy" and when Officer Howard Slater, of the Prince Georges County police arrived to take him to Hyattsville she refused to remain behind.

At Washington detective headquarters, Green denied all the charges against him. The indictments returned by the Prince Georges grand jury charge him with assault and battery and assault with intent to kill.

Questioned about the alleged beating of the child, who fumbled when her father asked her to spell "Patty," Green refused to talk until he had consulted a lawyer. He said he had arrived in Washington on Sunday and had been living with his daughter at the A street address.

2 College Boys Die of Drinking Stolen Wood Alcohol in Texas

By the Associated Press.

Sherman, Tex., June 4.—Wood alcohol, playfully pilfered from a school laboratory, brought death to two Austin College students and left eight others ill tonight. College heads began a thorough investigation.

Dead after drinking the stolen alcohol were Durwood Newman, 19, and James Garrett, 20, lifelong friends and roommates, of Athens, Tex.

Dr. E. B. Tucker, president of the college, said the boys admitted breaking into the chemistry building Sunday night and taking a quantity of methyl (or wood) alcohol.

Physicians said they could have saved the lives of both boys had they known the nature of their illness. The stricken lads insisted food—not wood alcohol—was responsible.

Authorities said other students, whose names were not divulged, had been treated on the possibility they had partake of the wood alcohol. They said the gallon container, from which the fluid had been taken, was labeled methyl alcohol, technical name for wood alcohol.

The container carried the usual precautionary warning and had not been completely emptied. Authorities said the students apparently brought their own container.

The board of regents, convening in annual session, promptly investigated the tragedy. Dr. Tucker said the prank "was against all college regulations."

The deaths cast gloom over the student body as senior students entered upon the eighty-sixth annual commencement exercises tonight. Both Newman and Garrett were sophomores and had starred on freshman football and basket ball teams last season.

Baltimore Girl's Kiss Launches Gay June Week at Annapolis

By John Randolph.
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, June 4.—A kiss on the sailorly lips of Midshipman Walter A. Moore, of Port Arthur, Tex., today began June Week at the Naval Academy.

The kiss was bestowed by Miss Hilda Hazard, of Baltimore, Midshipman Moore's "drag," who saluted him thus immediately after presenting to him the national and academy colors as commander of the honor company. She was attired in a long and filmy dress, the skirt of which flowed gracefully over the grass, and her big hat hid from several thousand spectators the reward for merit Mr. Moore received with the flags.

The regiment of midshipmen, 1,700 strong, had marched on the parade ground a few minutes before and, after going through the manual of arms and a few preliminary military flourishes, was drawn up stiffly in line of battalions. The regiment had stood with arms presented while the band played the "Star-Spangled Banner."

After the kiss, and three cheers by the entire regiment, the honor company, with Mr. Moore marching in command, passed proudly in review before Miss Hazard, Admiral Foote Sellers, academy commandant, and other notables; took its place again in the regimental formation, and became only a unit in the cadet body which took its orderly phalanxes off the field and ended the ceremony.

Later there was a dance for the midshipmen, their girls, other friends and relatives. In the morning there had been practical drill in gunnery and marine and elec-

Trade Practice Of Chain Store Buying Probed

Committee Inquiry Broadened on Eve of Investigation.

Operating under powers paralleling authority of the Federal Trade Commission, a special House committee today will launch a sweeping investigation into large chain and department store buying, selling and alleged lobbying activities.

Scope of the inquiry was unexpectedly broadened yesterday by an amendment empowering the committee "to investigate the trade practices of individuals, partnerships, and corporations engaged in big-scale buying and selling of articles at wholesale or retail."

The amendment, speedily adopted by the House, was sponsored by Representative Wright Patman, (Democrat), Texas, who became chairman of the investigating committee following the illness of Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri.

Says Name Changed.

Cochran originally had asked investigation only of an alleged "super lobby" set up by large chain and mercantile interests, to be known as the "American Retail Federation." But when Patman took the helm of the committee, he immediately sought the broader authorization. In so doing, he claimed the federation through incorporation processes had changed its name and could not properly be reached by the investigators.

The amendment was approved by a voice vote, with little or no opposition. Patman immediately scheduled opening of the inquiry today. Col. Clarence O. Sherrill, president of the American Retail Federation, Inc., and formerly director of public buildings and parks here, was called to testify.

Other witnesses slated to appear today are Louis E. Kirstien, of Filene's Department Store, Boston, Mass., a member of the executive committee of the American Retail Federation, Inc., and Albert H. Morrill, president of the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Under Special Rule.

The amendment broadening what was originally intended to be a chain store lobby investigation was called up in the House yesterday under a special rule, by Representative Arthur H. Greenwood, of Indiana.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, assistant Republican leader, asked why all this power was necessary to investigate chain store "influence" on Congress. Patman insisted incorporation of the American Retail Federation had taken them out of the range of the original resolution.

"The question is whether the large concerns and chains have pooled their resources for the purpose of squeezing out the little fellow," he argued.

Patman declined to say last night whether he intended to use the new authorization to investigate interests outside of the so-called chain and department store lobby.

The Cochran resolution adopted in April charged the alleged lobby already has been pledged $750,000 by strong chains and department stores, and that small independent retail merchants would be "forced" to contribute an additional $2,000,000 annually.

Sees Powerful Lobby.

Cochran charged that the lobby was "the greatest aggregation of rich and powerful department stores and chain stores of America ever brought together for the purpose of directly or indirectly nullifying the effects of the NRA, the AAA, the Sherman act, the Clayton act and other antitrust laws now on the statute books of this Nation, and by propaganda and other methods inimical to the public welfare, to attempt to control and influence the Congress of the United States in its legislative deliberations."

Besides Chairman Patman, the House investigating committee comprises four other Democrats, Bloom, of New York; Lucas, of Illinois; Dockweiler, of California, and Cole, of New York; one Progressive, Boileau, of Wisconsin, and one Republican, McLean, of New Jersey.

Clipper to Fly in Week.

Roosevelt's Strategy On NRA; Back To The Law Of Tooth And Claw; A Modern Fabian?

By Raymond Clapper

When the steam shovels began digging the big hole on Pennsylvania avenue across the street from the White House, some folks said Mr. Roosevelt was preparing to bury the Blue Eagle there.

They appear to have been correct.

Mr. Roosevelt's plan is to drop everything connected with NRA except in two minor respects.

He will, if Congress enacts necessary legislation, retain the research staff of NRA and permit it to function as a live industrial and economic library. Under Dr. Leon Henderson, the stocky young expert from the Russell Sage Foundation, the NRA Division of Research and Planning has collected the most complete data on economic activity in the United States that ever has been assembled. Practically everyone agrees that this material should be preserved.

Furthermore, Mr. Roosevelt's plan is to have this organization continue to study economic activity in the country during the next year so that at the end of that time some idea can be gained as to what the results have been of business operating under its own steam and with none of the NRA controls.

* * * *

As a slight gesture, Mr. Roosevelt also wants the Government to have the right to limit its purchases of supplies and materials both for routine activities and for the works program, to concerns who will supply them under minimum wage and maximum hour standards and without use of child labor. This limitation would apply only to Government contract goods. The President suggests, however, that a good moral effect on industry generally might result from this governmental yardstick. Some of the NRA organization would be retained to supervise the application of such standards.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt has asked congressional leaders to modify the Clark resolution, recently adopted by the Senate to extend NRA until April 1 of next year and strike out all references to codes.

That would continue NRA as an entity for the purposes just outlined. But the NRA as it is known to the country would go out the window. The Blue Eagle would be buried. Business is free to operate as it will—but in the shadow of the antitrust laws which Mr. Roosevelt did not mention. For all practical purposes Mr. Roosevelt goes back to the old order, in so far as industrial partnership with the Government is concerned.

* * * *

This decision was somewhat unexpected. He had been urged to attempt to rewrite NRA so that it could supervise clearly interstate industry under restrictions against unfair trade practices. Donald Richberg, of NRA; Hugh Johnson, formerly of NRA, and a host of others believed that could be done. Dr. Felix Frankfurter and another school advised Mr. Roosevelt to junk the whole works. The latter group won, apparently.

* * * *

What is in the back of Mr. Roosevelt's mind can only be inferred. His long press conference last week and the one this week, viewed together, suggest a certain strategy. Last week he said the Supreme Court had in effect put the country back to the horse and buggy stage, and had denied the Federal Government the authority to deal with national economical and social problems. The issue, he said, was whether the country would have to be governed in economic and social legislation by 48 State sovereignties.

For the time being Mr. Roosevelt seems to have decided to let the country operate under that dispersed authority. He emphasized that business does not have to abide by hours and wage limits or anything else in the codes. It can breathe the free air of rugged individualism again. He refuses to apply the principle of voluntary codes which so many groups in the business world have suggested. He has gone back exactly where Herbert Hoover has urged. He has scrapped everything.

But he expects to keep books on this. Through the NRA research library, the results of this unrestrained business activity will be recorded. Next spring, as the 1936 presidential campaign opens, he will have his parallel columns to show what happened under NRA and what happened without it.

Unless he has reversed all of his belief that NRA offered basic control machinery necessary in this age, Mr. Roosevelt must expect that the comparison will be in favor of what NRA attempted to do. He must be saying, in effect, to opponents of NRA—"You asked for it, now you have it." He must expect that by April 1 of next year, when the proposed Clark resolution would expire, the country will clamor for a return of what NRA was supposed to represent. In other words, he must be looking forward to vindication through the test of experience.

If this isn't a tacit invitation for a return to the law of tooth and claw as a demonstration to show the country again what it is really like, what else can he have in mind?

* * * *

Once upon a time there was a Roman general known as Fabian Maximus. He became famous during the Punic wars because he avoided direct engagements with Hannibal and used dilatory tactics, thereby fojling his antagonist.

Is it possible that Mr. Roosevelt has set himself to be the great modern Fabian?

If so, it is a heroic gamble, on a Napoleonic scale. If the next year turns out badly the setting is perfect for Mr. Roosevelt's vindication.

But what if business recovery goes forward, wages remain good and get better, and the country continues its steady climb? At the thought of that, some of the discouraged New Dealers may very well be saying to Mr. Roosevelt now as the Roman senators said sharply to Gen. Fabian, "One more such victory and we are lost."

After the Supreme Court's NRA decision, some Blue Eagle enthusiast who evidently believed the court was unaware of changing conditions, telegraphed to a high Administration official his revision of the late Vice President Marshall's famous prescription as follows:

"What the country needs is a Supreme Court with five senses, rather than a 5-cent cigar."

Reich Program to Boost Navy Offered English at Parley

arms expert who was named Ambassador Extraordinary for the conferences, claimed the Reich's effective post-war tonnage includes only five 10,000-ton pocket battleships, six 6,000-ton cruisers, 12 destroyers and 12 submarines. Of the total tonnage of 163,000, it was stated, 64,000 tons are in pre-war ships which will be scrapped.

Decision on Limits.

Well-informed German sources here said the German Fuehrer authorized Von Ribbentrop to accept limits of 35,000 tons for battleships and 10,000 tons for cruisers, the limitations imposed by treaty on present world naval powers. Existing treaties expire at the end of next year.

France's and Italy's expected refusal to accept any limits on either the size or number of submarines and destroyers probably will be duplicated by Germany, it was indicated.

Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, welcomed Von Ribbentrop and his colleagues at this morning's initial session, which was private.

Later Sir John turned the leadership of the British delegation over to R. L. Craigie, counselor of the foreign office and former Charge d'Affairs of the British embassy in Washington. A son of the late Admiral Craigie, he has been in charge of naval matters at the foreign office for several years.

It was believed the conversations would extend into next week and the British were hopeful the Germans would accept a program which could be included in a world naval limitation agreement.

Seek Conference.

Despite the failure of the Anglo-American-Japanese talks last winter, the British are firmly resolved that some sort of world conference must be held this year. They would like to see Germany brought into an agreement with the five big naval powers.

Some British quarters voiced disappointment that Hitler sent Von Ribbentrop as head of the German delegation, instead of some official of cabinet rank. Von Ribbentrop's uninvited visits to London in the last year as Hitler's unofficial observer stirred some resentment here.

British officialdom in general is strongly opposed to international contacts with unofficial observers and this feeling has extended to President Roosevelt's various European observers.

Club Women Face Birth Control Vote

Detroit Session Likely to Favor Resolution.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 4.—Such controversial subjects as birth control, anti-lynching legislation and the World Court faced the General Federation of Women's Clubs as it convened here tonight for its triennial convention.

Although eight proposed resolutions will not come up for action until Wednesday, discussion today revolved principally about that on birth control which, if adopted, would place the organization, representing 2,000,000 club women, on record as favoring dissemination of scientifically controlled contraceptive information.

The subject was approved for forum discussion by State and local organizations at the Hot Springs convention last fall.

Mrs. S. Blair Luckie, chairman of the legislative committee and sponsor of the birth control resolution, said today she anticipated some opposition, but expected its adoption by a large vote since 43 clubs have indorsed it with only five voicing opposition.

Lemke Submits New Farm Bill As Substitute

Measure Aimed to Replace Act Court Voided as Unconstitutional.

By the Associated Press.

A bill designated as a substitute for the recently invalidated Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium act, carrying changes to conform to constitutional limitations, was submitted to Congress yesterday in a bill by Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota.

Like its predecessor, the new measure would amend the bankruptcy act. Instead of a five-year moratorium on farm indebtedness, the new amendment allows a three-year respite. Lemke said it "virtually eliminates" the scaling-down provision of the original act, but permits a farmer to retain possession of his mortgaged property by paying a rental value fixed by the court.

In holding the original amendment unconstitutional, the court ruled the 1 per cent interest rate the farmer could pay the mortgage holder virtually amounted to the taking of property. The new amendment, Lemke said, mentions no interest rate, but provides for payment of rental value of the property during the moratorium period.

"The court, in its decision, forgot that in bankruptcy no interest is charged," Lemke said. "It based its decision upon the fifth amendment to the Constitution and forgot all about the constitutional provision authorizing Congress to enact bankruptcy legislation."

Shortening Permitted.

The new bill would permit shortening of the three-year period if, in the opinion of the court, the emergency has passed before that time. Lemke said that if a farmer were able to pay his mortgage before the end of the three-year period he could do so by paying the value of the property as established by the court at the time he desired to pay.

Meanwhile an effort to coordinate Federal and State government control over the distribution of milk and fruits and vegetables was disclosed to be a primary feature of the newly rewritten farm-adjustment amendments.

AAA officials said rough drafts of two proposed changes would be in the hands of Congress by tonight. Meanwhile consideration of revisions in the basic agricultural adjustment act had not been concluded.

Granary Still Proposed.

Officials said the old amendment, proposing the ever-normal granary advocated by Secretary Wallace, probably would be resubmitted without change. This plan would employ the adjustment program to equalize supply over big and little crop years through Government storage of surpluses.

The new milk and fruit and vegetables amendments were said to be very similar to the old, with authority over intrastate commerce left to the States and the interstate supervision in the hands of the Federal Government.

AAA licenses were said to be definitely out. Instead, officials said, the new amendments would give the Secretary of Agriculture specific directions in handling violations of marketing agreements through a system of orders and regulations similar to that used by the Federal Trade Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

France's First Lady Amid Social Whirl

the skyscrapers looked like minarets which gave the city an Oriental appearance. She is most eager for President Lebrun to see it.

"I hope sometime he will come to the United States with me," she smiled. On the third finger of her left hand was a plain, rather heavy gold band. She wore no other rings, but a neat little gold necklace set with small jewels encircled her plump throat and a diamond shone from each ear. She was dressed for the White House tea when she received the press and wore a becoming white toque, feather trimmed, and a navy blue sheer ensemble with touches of light applique embroidery on one wide lapel.

The women of her country, she said, are taking more and more interest in politics. She is convinced they will vote some day. As for great women leaders in France—Mme. Lebrun looked rather puzzled at the question; decided there is none. She herself does some missionary and welfare work, especially for children. That is the extent of her public life. She seemed much more interested in talking about her four grandchildren—Ann Marie, Peter, Helen and Jean Paul—than in politics; explained she would not have time to buy gifts to take back to them. Her daughter, Mme. Freysselinard, and her daughter-in-law, Mme. Jean Lebrun, who accompanied her to Washington, will do all the shopping.

Packed With Activity.

Mme. Lebrun's 24-hour stay here is packed to the last minute with activity. When she arrived at Union Station yesterday at 1:40 p. m., accompanied by the French Ambassador and Mme. Laboulaye who had gone to New York to meet her, she was immediately surrounded by virtually the entire personnel of the French Embassy. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull were also in the welcoming party.

From the train the First Lady of France was whisked to the Embassy. After a short rest, which included time to dress for Mrs. Roosevelt's tea, she held her press conference. After the tea there was a reception at the Embassy, followed by a state dinner at the White House.

This morning Mme. Lebrun will visit Mount Vernon to place a wreath on Washington's tomb. At noon she will leave for New York and will have her luncheon on the train. And on Friday, after a round of entertainments in New York, she will sail for France where she will be "only the wife of the President."

ported by the Senate Agriculture Committee and now on the Senate calendar will be his next objective, he said. They are the Wheeler 16-to-1 silver bill, and the Frazier-Lemke bill for $3,000,000,000 expansion on a structure of farm mortgages.

Failure of the Senate to override the President's veto of the inflationary Patman bill, however, was believed in Administration quarters to relegate these other measures to at least temporary oblivion, along with the bonus.

Prior to yesterday's Patman bloc decision, Thomas explored the possibility of a bonus compromise, and discussed one proposal to partially pay off the bonus with his House and Senate colleagues. The group reached a "Patman bill, or nothing" decision however.

Railroad Is Sued In Sequel to Crash

Action Alleges Failure to Provide Watchman.

The Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday ordered their counsel to institute civil suits against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for failure to provide a watchman at the Rockville, Md., grade crossing where 14 children were killed in a train-bus crash in April.

About 330 separate suits will have to be filed, Edward Peter, jr., counsel to the commissioners, said. A separate action will have to be instituted for each day the railroad failed to provide a watchman at the crossing, he pointed out.

The law requiring a watchman from 6 a. m. to midnight was passed in 1912. However, the statute of limitations bars the filing of suits for offenses more than a year old. Also, the railroad has provided a watchman since the crash, so that only the alleged offenses during an 11-month period can be the basis of suits. The 1912 law established a fine of $50 for each day that no watchman is on duty, making the total sum involved about $16,500.

Credit Extended Soviet by Czechs

$10,500,000 to Be Spent for Goods Under Pact.

By the United Press.

Moscow, June 4.—The Soviet Union today received a credit of 250,000,000 koruna ($10,500,000) from Czechoslovakia, the first loan accorded Russia by that country since the revolution.

The entire sum, under the agreement, will be spent for Czechoslovakian goods. The Soviet Union will pay 6 per cent interest on the credit which runs for five years.

London, June 4 (U.P.).—The Skoda Armament Works probably will be the chief beneficiary of the Czechoslovak-Russian credit agreement, London observers said today. They based this interpretation on the fact the loan follows reorganization of the Soviet national defense a few months ago.

Proceeds of the loan, however, should be useful in expediting the acquisition of goods and raw materials from London, Antwerp and other points via Prague, observers said.

Sabath Demands Prosecuton In Wardman Realty Financing

did not have authority to place anyone in charge of the holdings.

Wardman pictured Stanley as a man who "had all the opinions" and predicted bondholders as a class would go unprotected "until you get rid of all the Halsey-Stuarts in the country."

The builder declared he knew little about the bookkeeping of his companies.

"I did the building work," he added, "and signed the papers when they were put before me. All that stuff was foreign to me."

Accuses Bankers of Fraud.

He accused "the bankers" of defrauding him and "the widows and orphans" who invested in his properties.

"They wiped me out," he protested. "I'm broke now, but I'm still going."

Wardman said the crash came as a surprise to him.

"I thought I was a rich man," he testified. "Why, I was paying big income taxes. I raised the salaries of my associates and then I woke up and found I didn't have a nickel."

The witness charged "the bankers" with depressing the price of the securities in the Wardman companies so they could buy the bonds at a low price.

Wardman contended the management of the properties by Thomas D. Carson and Humphrey Lloyd, put in charge by "the bankers," was "intentionally destructive."

Immunity Waiver Refused.

Stanley, tall and sun-tanned, referred to his indictment at Minneapolis on a charge of using the mails to defraud as "litigation with the United States Government."

Representative Culkin (Republican), New York, objected to further questioning of Stanley because "we would actually be giving him immunity."

"Are you willing to waive immunnity?" Sabath inquired.

"I'm advised not to," Stanley responded.

Stanley then requested permission to make a partial statement, but he was shut off and excused when Representative Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas, objected:

"That would be a favorable statement and we couldn't cross-examine."

A moment later, Julius I. Peyser, receiver for the Wardman proper-Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, complained that Halsey Stuart & Co. ties, testified Stanley "wanted to control the entire situation" after the courts intervened.

Favors Court Control.

Questioned by Sabath, Peyser said he favored legislation which would require courts to approve all real estate refinancing plans before bonds could be sold.

R. S. V. Hartz, representative of the Employes' Savings Fund of the was guilty of "tragically bad judgment" in the refinancing, but emphasized he believed the company was not guilty of "intentionally defrauding" investors.

James P. Hobbs, former associate of Wardman, detailed the refinancing handled by Halsey-Stuart & Co. He said $11,000,000 of first mortgage refinancing bonds and $2,500,000 in debentures were issued and sold.

No provision was made, the witness said, for paying off $4,000,000 of the bonds, which became due in 1931, three years after the refinancing.

Another witness, Robert Taylor, a former Wardman associate, testified the bankers advanced money on "very doubtful security" from the sale of Wardman bonds to prevent the enterprise from going into bankruptcy. That was done, he explained, so the bankers could dispose of other securities then unsold.

6 Children Are Killed By Explosion of Shell

Warsaw, Poland, June 4 (U.P.).—Six children, aged 9 to 12, were fatally injured by the explosion of an old World War shell near the village of Smorgon, outside Vilna, today.

They found the shell in a brook and, dragging it out, were taking it apart when it exploded.

One child was blown nearly a quarter of a mile, dying instantly. Five others were badly wounded, dying either on the way to the hospital or on the operating table.

A seventh was given a chance to live.

House Leaders Licked in Fight To Expand TVA

Administration Tosses In Sponge as Opponents Refuse to Yield.

By the United Press.

The New Deal apparently has lost its fight to enlarge the powers of the Tennessee Valley Authority at this session of Congress.

Opponents of the TVA amendments sponsored by Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, stood firm yesterday in the House Military Affairs Committee, where they succeeded in tabling the measure, 13 to 12, almost two weeks ago. The outlook was hopeless and the Administration threw in the sponge.

The bill passed the Senate last month. It would authorize TVA to issue bonds up to $100,000,00 and would clarify the agency's right to sell surplus power—a right that has been questioned, under present TVA legislation, in an adverse Federal court decision.

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns talked to some of the insurgent Democrats yesterday, but without success. Chairman John J. McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Military Affairs Committee, shrugged his shoulders and shook his head even before reporters had time to phrase a question. The opposition was solid; there was no use trying to obtain reconsideration.

Later McSwain said he intended to introduce a new TVA bill in the House, after conferring with the President.

This bill, he indicated, would embody compromises designed to win opponents' votes: a clause preventing TVA "interfering" with long-established industries in the region; clauses providing audits by the Federal Power Commission to determine the cost of TVA power; and clauses prohibiting TVA from selling its surplus power until the power commission determined whether it actually was producing a surplus.

These changes, however, already have been offered the insurgent committeemen and have been rejected flatly.

"I hope some sort of a new compromise TVA bill can be worked out," Byrns said, but his hope seemed hollow.

Stratosphere Ascent Awaits Good Weather

Rapid City, S. Dak., June 4 (AP).—The $40,000 balloon for the National Geographic-Army stratosphere flight was rigged today with 2 miles of rope and webbing and put back in its crate to await favorable weather for inflation.

Expert balloon handlers laid out the lower end of the bag on a canvas floor and fastened 160 ropes to the lower catenary band.

Weather prospects, sufficiently bright yesterday to cause preparations to be rushed, were unfavorable today and flight officials said there appeared to be little promise of an ascent for at least several days.

Leaders Expect Session to Last Far Into Season

Word Passed Roosevelt Is Adding to 'Must' Legislative Program.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional chiefs set themselves last night for a session lasting far into the summer when some leaders passed word around that the President not only was preserving his original "must" legislative program, but was adding to it.

The additions, it was said privately by party spokesmen, were measures to regulate the bituminous coal industry and to guarantee the collective bargaining rights of labor—the Guffey-Snyder and the Wagner labor dispute bills.

Some changes, it was added, will be made in both measures. They might even emerge from Congress bearing different titles. But the spokesmen said the principles of these two would be enacted before Congress adjourned. Their adjournment date guesses ranged from July 15 to August 17.

Additions Are Listed.

The additions made the "must" program, as summarized by these leaders, include: NRA extension on a limited basis; utilities holding company elimination or regulation; regulation of motor bus transportation; expansion of Tennessee Valley Authority powers; continuance of existing nuisance taxes; readjustment of ship subsidies and changes in the farm adjustment act.

Because of the present congressional situation, the leaders looked for a long and hard session. They said the President still stood by his determination to have Congress do everything possible this year so a short session may be held in 1936—the year of national elections.

Labor's reaction to the Administration boost reported given the Wagner and Guffey-Snyder bills was told in a "very pleasing" comment from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Trouble Is Expected.

But congressional leaders looked for anything but smooth sailing on the two new measures. In fact, one—from below the Mason-Dixon line—said the Guffey-Snyder plan would "have a tough time because it's anathema to the Southern coal operators." Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, said he would introduce at once a new draft of the plan to create a "little NRA" for the soft coal industry.

Both the Wagner and Guffey bills were discussed at the Cabinet meeting yesterday. Nothing was said afterward about them, but Secretary Perkins indicated clearly the determination to keep the social security bill on the program when she asserted it was on "sound constitutional grounds."

Chairman Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, called his House Labor Committee to meet today. He had a number of "minor" amendments proposed to the labor disputes measure and said they would be offered when the bill was brought up on the floor. It already has passed the Senate.

NRA Foes Seek Enlightenment

Face Saving and Politics Are Charges Hurled at Roosevelt.

Taken aback by the President's apparent abandonment of any plans for a binding NRA code structure, foes of the Blue Eagle in Congress last night sought new light on the unexpected maneuver. Leaders confidently forecast quick approval of the skeletonized plan, but opponents foresaw another long drawn-out controversy.

Confusion as to ultimate objectives of the revised NRA program found many erstwhile opponents of NRA legislation unwilling to comment. Others sprang nimbly to the attack, charging "face saving" action by the White House and "job politics."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, insisted details of the legislation are yet to be worked out by his group. He will call a meeting of his committee "in two or three days" to frame the revised Clark resolution, he said.

Move Up to House.

The next move is up to the House, the Senate having already adopted the 9-month Clark NRA extension plan before the Supreme Court invalidated the existing Blue Eagle set-up. Once the House revises the resolution in line with sharply restricted White House plans, the Senate will be given an opportunity to concur or call for a conference with the House.

Belief that yesterday's White House move may be laying the foundation for future submission of a constitutional amendment was generally expressed. On this point the White House was noncommittal. A group of independent House members, however, was busily drafting an amendment cutting across the Supreme Court's recent interpretation of the Blue Eagle's scope.

"Disappointment" at the "lack of constructive NRA action" by the White House, was expressed by at least one Republican leader last night—Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware.

President Quits Efforts to Save NRA Code, Jobs

Small Staff to Be Kept to Do Research for Use in Future.

ask what he may do then is like asking how old is Ann, the President indicated.

Indeed, the President declined to reveal what his future moves will be and he again evaded answering whether his ultimate objective is amendment of the Constitution to give the Federal Government jurisdiction over working conditions, fair trade practices and production in industry and business.

But this again was believed to be his goal, since the thought prevailed among observers that the purpose of having summarized what happened, to industry and employes, first under NRA codes, and then what happens after reverting to the old system is to supply factual data for a fight to amend the Constitution.

Part of Staff to Stay.

Continuance of NRA as a research body has two other effects. It maintains jobs for nine months more for a part of the 5,400 persons employed by that agency—4,200 in Washington—and it keeps a spotlight on industry, which may act as a moral deterrent to slashing wage rates, extending working hours or the employment of child labor.

On the other hand, abandonment of legal NRA principles brings back into full play the force of the anti-trust laws, thus making dangerous concerted action by an industry. For that reason efforts of industries to maintain voluntarily the provisions of NRA codes have been made difficult, if not risky.

Nothing was said by the President at his press conference, however, which would indicate that he was prompted to retain a skeleton NRA organization by any desire to bring moral pressure to bear on business and industry. On the contrary, he emphasized that business and industry were free of code restrictions. He said he did not want to raise any false hopes on the part of any corporation or individual that anything he had done yesterday meant any further enforcement of code provisions.

The President explained that the plan he announced would mean without question a very large cut in the officers and employes now attached to the NRA but would mean retention of a substantial number of them.

To Salvage Sub-agencies.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed "deep appreciation" for the "unselfish work" performed by the thousands of men and women in the NRA organization and expressed regret for "the circumstances under which the retirement of many of them from Government service becomes obligatory."

In addition to this arrangement for liquidation of the NRA and the porposal for legislation to require that standard working conditions be maintained on work done for the Federal Government, the President revealed that legislation had been prepared, or is nearing completion, to recreate the FACA for the control of the liquor industry; the Electric Home and Farm Authority, the Petroleum Administrative Board and the Central Statistical Board.

He said that three agencies which had completed their work would be permitted to expire. These were the Office of Special Adviser to the President on Foreign Trade, the Committee on Economic Security and the Advisory Council on Economic Security.

Of these the most important was abandonment of the office of special trade adviser to the President, held by George N. Peek. Because of frequent clashes between Peek and Secretary of State Cordell Hull it was predicted several months ago in The Post that this office would be abolished. Peek's Import and Export Bank, authorized by separate legislation enacted in January, will be retained.

Mr. Roosevelt explained that the foreign trade adviser's office was being permitted to expire because that agency had completed its work. He did not elaborate this statement, which caused some perplexity. Aside from several statistical reports to the President, one of which was generally assailed as inaccurate, there is no record of any work done by the trade adviser.

Mr. Roosevelt said that existence of the National Emergency Council and the National Resource Board, both set up under the original NRA act, could be continued by amending executive orders which created them. Hereafter they will function under authority of the works relief act.

Termination of seven labor boards created under NRA also will be permitted, the President said, including the National Labor Relations Board. As a substitute for them, the President has proposed a supplemental appropriation of $800,000 for the Labor Department to conduct additional mediation and conciliation activities and thus take over a small portion of the work of the boards abolished.

The President pointed out that the Wagner labor disputes bill, if enacted—and a drive in that direction has been started, although some still doubt whether the measure would be constitutional—would set up tribunals which would substantially cover the functions heretofore exercised by the seven boards abolished.

White House NRA Statement

The White House statement on plans for NRA follows:

In order to meet an immediate problem relating to the executive branch of the Government as a result of the Supreme Court decision, two steps have been discussed and agreed to by members of the Administration and leaders of Congress:

1 (a). Passage by the House of Representatives of the Senate joint resolution extending the life of the National Recovery Administration only to April 1, 1936. The President has made this recommendation to the Speaker, Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, and Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee this afternoon. This recommendation is based on the desirability of maintaining a comparatively small staff in Washington and in the more important centers of the country, in order to bring together and summarize the vast amount of information now in the possession of NRA, relating to the actual results of code administration and to collect information in regard to the effects on industry, both employers and employes, of the abandonment by the Government of code enforcement or requirements. These latter refer to working conditions and to fair trade practices. This information will, it is believed, be of great value to the Congress, the Administration and the country as a whole.

(b) The other reason for continuing a skeleton organization of NRA is that such an organization will be useful in carrying out the proposed requirement that Government purchases and contracts be placed only with corporations or contractors who live up to certain minimum requirements.

(c) If the House of Representatives approves the joint resolution passed by the Senate, that portion of the resolution which in effect relates to codes will, of course, be inoperative insofar as the old codes are concerned.

(d) The extension of the National Recovery Administration would mean, without question, a very large cut in the officers and employes now attached to NRA, but would mean the retention of a substantial number of them.

Thanks Loyal Staff.

"In this connection," the President said, "I want to record my deep appreciation and that of the country for the unselfish work which thousands of men and women employed under or in conjunction with the National Recovery Administration have done in the past two years. I extend to them my sincere thanks and I regret the circumstances under which the retirement of many of them from Government service becomes obligatory."

It should not be assumed by any person that this proposed continuation of the National Recovery Administration, in skeletonized form, relates in any way to the enforcement of working conditions or fair trade practices formerly existing under the codes. All such requirements were eliminated by the Supreme Court decision.

2. The other measure which, like the first, must be considered as only a very partial stop-gap, relates to Government contracts. Only a very small portion—probably not much over 1 per cent of the industrial production of the country—is used in Government work. Nevertheless, the President feels that even though the percentage be small, the Government should take a practical and definite step to show its good faith in maintaining the larger objectives sought by NRA. The proposed legislation would authorize a requirement in every Government purchase that all persons engaged in the production of the supplies or in the carrying out of the contract shall be paid in accordance with minimum wage and maximum hour standards and that no person under the age of 16 years shall be employed. The same rule would apply to the use of Government loans or grants to States, municipalities or other local government agencies.

It is believed that this proposed bill carries out a moral responsibility of the Federal Government and it is hoped that such action will be followed as largely as possible by private industry in every one of its branches.

This proposed measure, however, like the first, does not make much progress toward obtaining the ultimate objectives of national standards for the working population of America nor for national standards which seek to protect honorable employers against the unfair practices of less honorable competitors.

Affected Agencies Listed.

3. The Supreme Court decision has affected a number of agencies which were set up in part or in whole under the authority of Title I of the national industrial recovery act. A careful review of the effects of the Supreme Court decision has been made.

(a) New legislation would be necessary for the continuance of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, for the Electric Home and Farm Authority, for the Petroleum Administrative Board and the Central Statistical Board. Legislation to meet these four ends is now under consideration.

(b) Two agencies can be continued by amendments to executive orders: The National Emergency Council and the National Resources Board. Both of them relate to planning for and execution of work relief and can, therefore, be continued under the work relief act.

(c) Three agencies have completed their work and will be terminated as heretofore planned on June 16—the Committee on Economic Security, the Advisory Council on Economic Security, and the Office of the Special Adviser to the President on Foreign Trade.

(d) Seven labor boards created under NRA must terminate in their present capacity. They are the National Labor Relations Board, the Petroleum Labor Relations Board, the Steel Labor Relations Board, the Textile Labor Relations Board, the Work Assignment Board for Cotton, the Work Assignment Board for Silk, and the Work Assignment Board for Wool.

The President has, however, sent to the Speaker of the House of Representatives a supplemental estimate of appropriations for the Department of Labor for the coming fiscal year in the sum of $600,000. This will enable the Secretary of Labor to conduct additional mediation and conciliation activities and thus take over a small portion of the work for the boards which are abolished. It is worth noting, however, that the authority of the Department of Labor extends only to mediation and conciliation. The Wagner labor bill, if enacted, would set up new tribunals which would substantially cover the functions heretofore exercised by the various boards above mentioned.

Johnson Sees NRA Salvage In Its Revision

Speech Urging Revamped Law Differs From Roosevelt Views.

Four hours before President Roosevelt announced abandonment of all but a few functions of the NRA, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, first NRA administrator, told the Washington Advertising Club that mistakes in writing the old law could easily be corrected to meet the objections of the Supreme Court.

Taking a directly opposite view to that of the President, who feels that the power of code enforcement is ended, Johnson said that correction of the law was "not a question of principle, but a pure matter of mechanics, easily corrected, leaving NRA just where it was."

"Bad" Test Case, He Says.

"It seems to me," he said, "that all we are faced with is the result of errors in a statute written under stress, of mistakes in its application, and of selecting a bad case to put before the court.

"I can criticise the first two as roundly as I will, because I am as much to blame as anybody. As to the third, I shall mention it because it is necessary to a clear picture of this problem."

This last statement evidently was intended as a criticism of Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, who had described the Schechter case as a "perfect case."

Calls Decision a "Shock."

"It was not a good case for a temperate text," he said, "yet the decision clearly came as a shock to some who said that they had staked their legal reputation on winning every point of it. Legal reputations of individuals were the least things to be lightly risked on one careless roll of the bones."

Johnson's talk, so widely divergent from the view of the President, was taken to lay at rest reports that he had been recalled to become "head man" in some new program.

FERA Allots $59,100 For Virginia Classes

Richmond, Va., June 4 (AP).—State Superintendent of Public Instruction Sidney B. Hall was notified today by FERA authorities in Washington that Virginia will receive $59,100 in June for emergency educational classes.

These vocational classes will be conducted under the supervision of J. L. Blair Buck, of the Department of Education. The FERA told Hall it would notify him later as to allotments for July, August and other months.

Three Virginia Youths To Try for West Point

By the Associated Press.

The War Department announced yesterday the following Virginia youths have been designated to qualify by mental and physical examination on June 12 for admission to West Point on July 1:

William P. Kevan, jr., Petersburg; Richard S. Gillis, jr., Lawrenceville, first alternate; Samuel M. Ragsdale, Kembridge, second alternate.

State Compacts On Jobs Asked By Miss Perkins

Plan Is Offered to Replace NRA Codes and End Competition.

Encouragement was given by Secretary Perkins yesterday to a plan for interstate compacts for uniform labor standards to replace the code standards eliminated by the NRA decision.

Speaking to representatives of 14 Northeastern States, gathered here to discuss the plan, Miss Perkins said such a plan seemed to "offer a possibility for bringing about a measure of uniformity among participating States with consequent reduction of competitive difficulties."

The State delegates discussed the possibility of limiting hours and abolishing child labor under State agreement, and possibly of fixing wages. A bill passed by the House April 1 authorizes such State compacts.

Miss Perkins predicted that such a plan would be slow of accomplishment and that it might fail if enforcement broke down in any one State. She added, however, that labor standards can be strengthened by exercise of the police power of the States.

No effort was made at the meeting to reach any conclusions, particularly as the delegates had not been informed concerning President Roosevelt's NRA plans.

Flood Menace Now Is Feared In Kansas City

Death Estimates Above 500 in 3 States and Mexico; Waters Race to East.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Mo., June 4.—The worst flood in years, ravaging cities and farms in the rich Kaw Valley of Kansas, surged eastward tonight toward Kansas City. Engineers there made ready to combat high waters comparable to those which inundated low-lying industrial sections in 1908.

Death estimates in a havoc-wreaking siege of floods and tornadoes sweeping the West and Mexico topped 500. This figure included the dead in Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska as well as in Mexico, where an estimated 400 persons were drowned.

Damage to crops and property in the three States was placed unofficially at upwards of $25,000,000.

As the Kaw River swirled through the business district of Manhattan, Kans.—site of Kansas State College—officials at Topeka, the State capital, pushed preparations for the tide expected there hourly.

National Guard Called.

At the direction of Gov. Alf M. Landon, two National Guard units were ordered out to speed the removal of farmers in the Kaw lowlands.

A howitzer company of 64 men was detailed to duty at Topeka and a machine gun company of 125 men at Lawrence, where the University of Kansas is situated. More than 400 additional guardsmen were held in readiness.

The flood's force in Kansas was centered between Manhattan on the west and Kansas City, Kans., on the east. Topeka is about 75 miles west of Kansas City.

U. S. to Reconstruct Flooded Nebraska Area

By the Associated Press.

McCook, Nebr., June 4.—Hundreds of homeless families were cheered tonight by the news that the Federal Government will provide funds to reconstruct the flood-ravaged Republican River valley.

Start of the rehabilitation efforts awaited only the arrival of Gov. R. L. Cochran, who arranged to rush to the stricken area from Washington by airplane to take personal charge of the program.

The unofficial death list totaled 99, but State Senator W. C. Bullard, general flood relief chairman here, predicted it would mount to 140. Forty bodies have been recovered. Hundreds of men continued the search for missing and dead in the 200-mile-long valley.

Two hundred and fifty Nebraska National Guardsmen, mobilized to aid in the emergency, were ordered to return to their homes today. Red Cross officials said 2,000 families in the valley were "homeless or seriously affected" by the worst flood in the history of the State.

Health Precautions Taken.

Every possible precaution was taken to safeguard health. The Red Cross has flown 1,000 cubic centimeters of typhoid fever vaccine to McCook and Stratton. Wells were tested and water boiled before used for drinking purposes.

The Governor conferred with President Roosevelt, Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins and other relief executives in Washington today and was given what he described as a "free hand" to meet the situation with Federal funds. Cochran said the rehabilitation program will be started as soon as he surveys the blighted district. He expected to arrive in North Platte by airplane at 6 a. m. tomorrow, and come to McCook to take personal charge of the work.

nation of the extent to which it would operate to bring about dissolution of "pyramided" holding companies.

Diterich said there was ample leeway in the bill for the commission to "play favorites," and termed the measure deceptive in indicating it sought to control only the utility business as engaged in interstate commerce.

"It is an attempt to nationalize the industry and take from the States every control they have over utilities," he asserted.

Hastings based his principal attack upon the constitutionality of the measure.

"It is time," he said, "that the Congress became Constitution-minded."

Hastings clashed with Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, who said he saw no reason why Congress could not eliminate holding companies if they found them a burden on interstate commerce.

"The primary purpose of this bill has no relation to interstate commerce," Hastings said. "The bill is using the interstate commerce clause solely as an excuse in order that Congress may get jurisdiction."

"Just because a company is engaged in interstate commerce," he continued, "gives no ground for Congress to lay its hands upon it."

Borah's observation that he understood its "intent is to regulate only those companies engaged in interstate commerce" found no agreement with Hastings.

"The bill goes farther," he insisted.

Hastings contended "there is an unlawful delegation of power" to the commission in defining holding companies and in compelling courts to name the commission as receiver of any utility holding company it decides to dissolve.

McCarter Says Utilities Must 'Fight for Life'

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 4.—Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Edison Electric Institute, rallied the privately owned power industry "to fight for its life" in his address to the annual convention of the institute today.

"The kid-glove stage has passed," he told the gathering of electric power company executives from all parts of the country. He asserted that the Roosevelt Administration seeks to wipe out the privately owned power industry and has subjected it to the "most devastating and destructive attack." His slashing counter-attack was in striking contrast to the more cautious and diplomatic utterances before the institute's convention last year.

McCarter said the institute had been formed as a nonpolitical body, but that the trustees had been forced to take the initiative after many months of waiting because the President and his advisers showed no disposition to work along with them in correcting whatever abuses existed.

He told of presenting "in person" to the President "a dignified memorial" setting forth "facts that seemed to the trustees to threaten the existence of this industry and appealed to the Government for a get-together policy for the elimination of whatever abuses and wrongs might be found to exist," but said he got nowhere.

"On the contrary," he said he was rebuffed by a public statement issued the following day by the chairman of the Federal Power Commission. He said flatly he believed the "devastating and destructive" attacks made by the present Administration were for the purpose of ending private operation of the electric industry and "its nationalization under Federal direction and ultimate ownership."

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, asserted that the United States under the New Deal was swallowing a "good dose" of Marxian Communism.

Kiss Launches Gay June Week For Annapolis

trical engineering. But that kiss was the big moment.

Tomorrow morning the Academy will stage its aquatic and seamanship events, another annual program.

In the afternoon another full-dress parade will be the occasion of the award of honors and prizes to the midshipmen who have distinguished themselves most in the last year. This will be a more formal affair, with all the band-playing and as many banners, but with no pretty Baltimore girl to soften the martial atmosphere.

Receive Diplomas Thursday.

The big day is Thursday, when 442 midshipmen will receive their diplomas from Senator Park Trammell, of Florida, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee. As usual, they will hurl their white caps into the air after the last diploma has been handed over. Of this number, all but 79 will receive their commissions as ensigns immediately. The 79 must await physical examination.

For the entire June Week, the midshipmen enjoy a freedom denied them the rest of the year. Only the plebes are required to answer meal formations, but even the plebes may have their "drags" at the Academy. They will be plebes only a few days longer anyway, for after graduation the first year men will be freed from their thralldom to upper classmen and a new first class will appear.

The graduating men, for the first time in four years, are now allowed to drive cars—if they have cars—in the streets of Annapolis, and not a few of them were taking advantage of it yesterday. Not a car driven by a midshipman was seen to be without at least one girl. Those less fortunate, unable so suddenly to abandon the martial air, marched the streets in twos and in step, or loitered less militarily with their girls, awaiting the hour at which they must fall in for the parade and the big kiss scene.

The Virginia winner was Letitia Krey, of Stuart Hall School, Staunton; West Virginia, Seppo Maki, of Weir High School Weirton, and Maryland, Ann Sifford Pearre, of Roland Park Country School, Baltimore.

$20 of Ransom Passed in West; Break Held Due

Kidnap Bill Found in Oregon; Agents Expect Results in 48 Hours.

George would not be taken out to search for the kidnapers' hideaway, where he was held prisoner for a week, but admitted the Federal men were looking to the youngster for aid.

Indications were the Government agents will have plenty of other help. The entire West suddenly became a land of amateur detectives as men, women and even children checked numbers on currency against printed lists of numbers on the ransom money.

Augmenting of ranks of the agents here gave promise of a drive to put at least one of the three or more kidnapers behind the bars by the end of the week.

"George's descriptions and recollections are what we are interested in most," said the Department of Justice spokesman today. He would not reveal whether the boy had been subjected to any thorough questioning.

Heavily timbered areas around Issaquah, near where George was released, were combed by searchers, who thrashed across the countryside.

Authoritative sources declared no arrests had been made in the case, which was described in Justice Department circles as having settled down to a "routine" check of all clews.

C. F. Urschel to Retell $200,000 Kidnap Story

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, June 4.—Charles F. Urschel, oil millionaire whose sharp ears led to solution of his $200,000 kidnaping, will testify against Ben B. Laska, Denver, and James C. Mathers, Oklahoma City, legal defenders of two of his kidnapers, in their kidnap conspiracy trial in Federal court here Monday.

District Attorney W. C. Lewis today announced his decision to call Urschel.

Urschel, just returned from a world cruise with his wife, has indicated willingness to retell the testimony that sent three men to Alcatraz Island and 15 others to prison.

Rep. Louis Raubat Hurt in Cab Crash

Representative Louis C. Raubat (Democrat), of Michigan, was injured yesterday when a taxicab in which he was riding overturned three times after a collision at Sixth street and Maryland avenue southwest.

According to police, Representative Raubat was en route from his home at 2200 Nineteenth street northwest to the House Office Building. The taxi, driven by John C. Stone, 49, of the 800 block Sixth street southwest, collided with another car, careened several feet and turned over three times.

Representative Raubat was taken to the Naval Hospital. He returned to his office after treatment for a sprained back, lacerations of the head and hands and a bruised hip. Stone was unhurt. Neither driver was held.

Hoover Charges New Deal Seeks European Rule

Former President Silent on Own Role in 1936 Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 4.—Charges of attempting to "change to a European form of government" were leveled at the Roosevelt Administration today by Herbert Hoover.

The former President couched his verbal thrust in this formal summary of his conversations last night with former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois:

"We discussed the effect upon the future of America of the Administration proposals to change to a European form of government."

Asked in an interview if he implied Fascism or some other type of polity in his statement, he answered:

"I won't go into that."

Inscrutable on Own Role.

Earlier, Lowden disclosed they discussed the proposed changes in the form of American government that are emanating principally from Washington" and looked upon them as forming the major issue of the 1936 campaign.

But Mr. Hoover declined to intimate what role he would play in the forthcoming struggle for the Presidency.

"Have you made any plans for the next year?" he was asked.

"No," replied Mr. Hoover.

Hale and obviously in the best of health, he was inscrutable as he made his reply.

He said he planned to spend the night here and to resume his trip by train to New York tomorrow.

Denies Seeing Leaders.

His presence gave him opportunity to sound out sentiment of Republicans who will gather in Springfield, Ill., next week for the "Grass Roots" rally of G. O. P. delegates from nine midwestern States, but he said he had no conference with party leaders scheduled.

The pronouncement on the 1936 issue jibed with views expressed by "grass rooters," who were prepared to take up as a major topic President Roosevelt's hint that future efforts may be made to centralize social and economic control in Washington.

Although Mr. Hoover does not plan to attend the convention and signers of the call have attempted to exclude mention of candidacies, Arthur Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture in the Hoover Cabinet, is a delegate and is scheduled to address the assemblage Monday at Abraham Lincoln's tomb.

Lowden to Speak.

Lowden, it was announced late today, will be the chief speaker at the gathering.

The former President drove to Lowden's extensive farm near Oregon, Ill., from Des Moines. He spent the night there and came on to Chicago today. His visit with Lowden brought together the successful nominee and his strongest rival at the 1928 Republican convention.

Mr. Hoover, who has inveighed against the NRA and "bureaucracy" in his recent statements, will attend meetings of the New York Life Insurance Co. board and of the trustees of the American Children's Fund, the Belgian Educational Foundation and the American Child Health Association in New York next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Burns Denies Scheme To Alter Government

By the Associated Press.

A quick assertion that nobody has proposed changing the form of Government was made by Speaker Byrns yesterday when informed of the Hoover-Lowden interpretation of recent Washington developments.

"There is no proposed change in the form of Government," Byrns said. "Of course, they (Republicans) are trying to put up this political bogey-man for which they have been casting around since the election."

Former President Hoover, after a visit with Frank O. Lowden, former Illinois Governor, said they discussed "the effect upon the future of America of the Administration proposals to change to a European form of government."

Republican Leader Snell, New York, declined to comment in any way on the statements, but gave his own "personal view" that proposals to change the form of government constituted an issue.

"I don't know of any better one," he said. "Heretofore, the President has said he was doing this only on account of the emergency.

"But it seems to me from his attitude toward the Supreme Court decision (on NRA), he intends to make it the permanent policy of the Government."

Hope Fades for Early End of Lumber Strike

Seattle, June 4 (AP).—Promises of a break in the Pacific Northwest's month-old lumber strike faded today.

Of 40,000 men on strike, only 8,000 have returned to work. Some mills which reopened yesterday, notably three in Seattle, were forced to close again today because of picketing.

Picket lines were maintained at Portland, Oreg., mills, and none of them reopened. There were some encouraging reports from Oregon, but for the most part it appeared if the strike was to be settled it would only be through a gradual resumption of operations.

William Newman Dies; Father of Noted Singer

Wichita, Kans., June 4 (AP).—William E. Newman, 64, father of Kathryn Newman, coloratura soprano, died suddenly of a heart attack here last night as he, Mrs. Newman and Kathryn were walking from a theater to their apartment.

Newman, an engineer on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, had taken a leave of absence to be at home during a visit of his daughter.

The American Messiahs + By the Unofficial Observer

Author of "The New Dealers"

Installment XVIII—Marx on the Half-Shell (Part 2)

This is the eighteenth installment of "American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders, now booming their way across the American political stage.

It was, in fact, both accidental and rather embarrassing for Norman Thomas to discover, after more than a decade of political agitation, that he had identified himself with a hot political issue in his efforts to improve the lot of Southern share-croppers. He had thereby stumbled upon one of the really explosive—dangerously so—questions in our national life.

In the spring of 1934, Norman Thomas began to proclaim that the share-croppers of the South were the real orphans of the New Deal storm. The South had inherited from the Civil War and Reconstruction period a large and unsatisfactory substitute for slavery in the form of share-cropper and tenant farmers. In 1932, forced sales of farms for delinquent taxes, bankruptcies and foreclosures on mortgages increased from 19.5 to 41.5 per thousand, until today 42 per cent of the farms in the United States are run by tenants, with the Southern States leading with an average of 58 per cent of the farms worked by non-owners for the benefit of landlords. In a recent report, the Rosenwald committee stated that the average level of living of the Southern share-cropper is far below that of the European peasant, pointing out that the application of the financial principles of industrial capitalism to an agrarian economy has produced a situation in which "the furnishing of the tenant with seed and tools and food and clothing at the traditional margain of from 20 to 30 per cent above cash prices has taken on a new aspect since it has become possible for landowners to secure their needed funds from the Farm Credit Administration . . . As a result, the Government finds itself an involuntary, if not unsuspecting, partner in usury."

The Rosenwald report bears out the impressions made on Norman Thomas in his visit to the South in February, 1934, at which time he bluntly stated that the cotton reduction program had not helped the share-cropper. At the time, the Department of Agriculture took cognizance of the facts but justified its own hand-washing policy by pointing out that the agricultural adjustment act had given them no mandate to reform the social system of the South. However, under Thomas's encouragement, Dr. William Amberson, of the University of Tennessee, completed a League for Industrial Democracy case study of over 500 share-cropper families in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi. Under the share system, the landlord furnishes the tenant farmer with a shack, tools and a mule and receives half of the proceeds from the produce of the land he works. There is no doubt that the share-cropper faces the same unfairness as the factory worker in the town where the company store operates. Landlords also have an agreement not to hire any share-cropper who is in debt to any other landlord. As it is estimated that at least 60 per cent of the cotton farmers are share-croppers, it is easy to see that a mere enhancement of the price of cotton under the New Deal adjustment program can not of itself insure better living conditions for the mass of Southern farmers, especially when the higher prices are achieved by a reduction of acreage in cotton. And with the mechanical cotton-picker "just around the corner," the dynamic possibilities of the Southern system of land-tenure can not be overestimated.

In the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of March 11, 1934, the following conditions were reported as typical:

"The owner reserves the right to employ any extra labor he deems necessary and charge it to the cropper's account.

"The cropper agrees to furnish the necessary labor to keep the ditches open, to pay 10 cents per acre for maintaining roads and ditches on the plantation, and to pay a supervision and management fee, which custom has fixed as 10 cents on the dollar of advances at the store."

Average Yearly Income Of Tenants Is $262

The Amberson committee reported that the average income per year for the share-cropper and his entire working family was $262. Living conditions are dire in every respect. Families live like animals in weird nests of tin cans, canvas and old packing cases, and pellagra—that disease of malnutrition—is increasing. The Department of Agriculture has taken cognizance of the situation, in the gingerly manner enjoined by the political and social TNT involved, and the 1934-35 cotton acreage reduction contract states "(the planter) shall effect the acreage reduction as nearly ratable as practicable among tenants on this farm; shall, insofar as possible, maintain on this farm the normal number of tenants and other employes," and provides that the tenant shall receive one-half a cent per pound for cotton not grown in 1934.

"Insofar as possible" is a phrase through which any plantation owner can drive a team of mules. The Amberson report contends that "the acreage reduction program has operated to reduce the number of families in employment on cotton farms . . . due to . . . failure to reduce acreage ratably, forcing some tenants into the 'no-crop' class" and goes on to state that many of the tenants are forced into the day-labor class, with wages as low as 65 cents a day, and also that there is widespread replacement of white employes by colored help who accept a lower standard of living.

The loosely worded cotton reduction contract, combined with inadequate enforcement of its provisions for agricultural labor, has created a group of restless, militant share-croppers who are responsive to the preachings of economic radicalism and are causing grave anxiety at Washington. For example, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration sent an investigator, Mrs. Mary Myers, to Marked Tree, Ark., to study the situation. Arkansas is the political bailiwick of Joe Robinson, Administration floor leader in the Senate. Her report has not been published.

Norman Thomas, in addition to his action in calling attention to the situation in the cotton belt, has intervened in the active politics of the South by promoting the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union in Eastern Arkansas. He has been energetic in the actual organization and has been assisted by several members of Commonwealth College, including Lucian Koch and Bob Reed. The union, which claims a membership of over 5,000, is unique in the South in that it is bi-racial, having enlisted the cooperation of white and black share-croppers in one of the most significant developments on the agricultural labor front. Last March, Thomas made a tour of the east Arkansas cotton regions and was driven out of the town of Birdsong and refused the right to hold a meeting in the public square at Marked Tree. (He later held the meeting from the porch of a private home there.) Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, had proposed dealing with the situation by permitting the share-croppers to acquire land by Federal loans, but Thomas wired Joe, "There will probably be massacre long before your plan of rural rehabilitation can be started."

Leaders Following Land Purchase Plan

Nevertheless, the leaders of Southern Democracy at Washington are following the land-purchase method of dealing with the cropper problem. The Bankhead bill proposes that a farm tenant corporation be formed, with a capital of $100,000,000 and the power to issue $1,000,000,000 worth of bonds. The cropper is to be entitled to buy a farm at the unit price of $2,000. His cotton crop at current price-levels would sell for $200, out of which interest and amortization charges of $80 a year would be deducted. This would leave him with an income of $120 a year, from which to pay taxes and production costs before clothing, feeding and educating his family. With the tendency toward cheap day labor, and the company or landowner store, the Bankhead system would probably leave him better off and more secure than he is under the present system of peonage, but Norman Thomas says that the Bankhead bill is totally inadequate and that, if it passes, he will continue his agitation in the Tenants' Union.

The situation is already becoming an acute political issue, and Gov. Futrell of Arkansas has refused to have temporary refugee camps for evicted share-croppers, while the AAA at Washington has not seen its way to dealing with the evicted farmers by establishing colonies on the Government-rented lands. So the cropper problem promises to become one of the most disturbing and dangerous problems of the agricultural front and of the South, where economic, social and political reform is long overdue. Norman Thomas thus finds himself in on the ground floor in the organization of justified discontent against these intolerable conditions. In this he has stolen a march on the Communists, who, though active in the South, think largely in terms of the industrial "proletariat" and of arousing the Negroes to revolutionary action. Thomas, on the other hand, has been successful in enrolling Negro clergymen in active service in the Tenants' Union, and the Rev. A. Brooking, Negro organizer for the croppers, had revolver shots around his home last March as a protest agains this "revolutionary" activities.

The materials of a social war are banking up in the cotton belt, as a result, and the Arkansas planters have started a "company union," the Marked Tree Cooperative Association, membership in which is limited to white share-croppers So far it has met with scant success, but the political machinery is distinctly in the hands of the planters. The croppers are caught between the cotton-reduction program of the Triple-A and the State administration of the FERA, and the Arkansas relief director is a planter. The truth is, of course, that if the Tenants' Union actually makes material headway throughout the South, a determined though somewhat subconscious effort will be made to divert its threat of social war into the old Southern channel of race hatred, and to save the Southern system by playing off the poor whites against the blacks. In these circumstances, the question arises whether Norman Thomas is a sufficiently astute politician to direct the storm his propaganda is helping to create. It seems extremely doubtful.

It is significant that the change of American Socialism from a minority political party, such as it was under Gene Debs, to a radical political propaganda group under Norman Thomas, should have passed unnoticed by the bulk of observers.

Party Leaders Thrive On Election Defeats

This is because the Socialist Party still goes through the motions of party politics and because its leader underscores his sermons to American capitalists by running for office with a uniform lack of success that ought to have suggested the truth long ago; namely, that Socialist Party politics have become simple publicity stunts to win attention to Socialist ideas and that, far from being discredited by defeat, the party leaders thrive on it. Victory would be the only thing which could expose their game as being an ingenious adaptation of Marxian dogma to the practice of American pressure politics.

Thomas has run for Congressman, Governor of New York (1924), Mayor of New York City (1925 and 1929), and President of the United States (1928 and 1932). His best showing was for Mayor in 1929, when he got 175,000 votes, as "silk-stocking" Republicans, including many bankers and corporation lawyers, voted for him because they couldn't stand the proletarian uncouthness of the Republican candidate, Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who was beaten by Jimmy Walker in Tammany's most costly victory of the present century.

Although Thomas does not appear to understand fully the true function of American socialism, he has opposed united fronts with other groups, instinctively, as being calculated to impair Socialism's value as propaganda, but he sees that it is quite possible that in 1940, if not 1936, a third party may be organized with a virtual Socialist platform. The Farmer-Labor platform of 1934 was an almost exact parallel to the Socialist platform of 1932, but such is the pig-headed dogmatism of most American radicals that the Socialists will probably attack their own program as "Fascist" if it is sponsored by another group. Moreover, as dissenters from Marx on some points of theory and as sturdy believers in democratic policies and methods of government, the Socialists find it difficult to reach a common front with the Communists, although they now have a special committee, appointed by the party congress this March in Buffalo, to look into the whole problem of radical hook-ups.

All that the Socialists have to contribute to a Third Party movement is a demonstration of successful municipal government in Milwaukee, the respectability and fluent pen and tongue of Norman Thomas, and an inherent ability to engage in abstruse doctrinal controversies until half-past Armageddon. There is one exception to be noted against this political weakness; the possibility that they may exploit and develop their new field for agitation at the bottom of the share-cropper situation in the South. But that, it is likely, will be stolen from them by either Long or the Communists, who are also very active in the South, and in any case, any effective work for the share-croppers will take the form of a social revolution in the South and will produce the old crop of night-riders, Ku Kluxers, vigilantes, lynchers and government by deputy sheriff, which might discredit Socialism as an effective political force and weaken its value as a campaign to educate Americans in the possibilities of economic brotherhood.

In the meantime, Thomas is playing his cards carefully. Although he has consented to examine the possibility of collaboration with the Communists, he has nothing to gain from normal political opportunism. His party's present stand contemplates a drive against the sales tax, in favor of increased income and inheritance taxes, and support of the 30-hour week. He has no patience with the panacea peddlers and has denounced Coughlin, Townsend and Utopia, Inc., as "Fascist in spirit but transient and futile and based on the puerile and impossible economics of the New Deal." He also does not go along with the advocates of a third party movement, feeling that it is not very strong or very popular and being chiefly anxious that Long, whom he regards as a thorough Fascist, should not grab off the third party leadership, although he is well-disposed to a Farmer-Labor movement with a Socialist platform. On this account, therefore, Thomas will be more apt to continue the political status quo, with Roosevelt taking the responsibility for economic and social transition and the Rev. Norman Mattoon Thomas using the Socialist Party platform as a means of supplying the New Deal with its specific policies. It is a situation which would make Marx turn in his grave and which causes bitter teeth-gnashing in Moscow, but it conforms to the essential guts of American politics and is probably the best and quickest way available for the orderly change of American institution away from individual competition and toward the new ideal for social cooperation—new, that is, to Americans.

Lee Boulevard Finishing Soon Is Held Likely

Plan to Raise $100,000 for Right-of-Way Gets Official's Approval.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 4.—Early completion of the Lee boulevard as the southern approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge across the Potomac at, Washington tonight seemed likely. The highway now ends two miles from the bridge.

Henry G. Shirley, chairman of the Virginia highway commission, accepted a tentative proposal offered by Arlington County officials at a conference in the Governor's office today and said he would recommend allocation of $100,000 in State funds for acquiring a 200-foot right-of-way on the Federally-approved route if the county would be responsible for the rest.

The department estimates $150,000 will be necessary to acquire the 200-foot route and State funds to the amount of $50,000 are available. Arlington County has appropriated $20,000 and Christopher B. Garnett, of the Arlington County board, said the county would get the remainder, either through persuading land owners to grant better terms or by raising additional funds.

Resolution Is Sought.

Shirley, who announced the highway commission would meet here Friday, asked Mr. Garnett to get a resolution from the board for presentation to the commission.

Shirley said the completion of the road was purely a question of cost as the highway department is now "in the red" and must balance its budget in the next fiscal year. He said Federal funds would be available for construction, but could not be used for acquiring rights of way.

Gov. Peery indicated the project would have his approval when it came from the highway commission if it would not throw the highway fund out of balance at the end of the fiscal year.

The importance of acquiring a 200-foot right of way was emphasized by Arno B. Cammerer, of the National Capital Planning Commission, who said the total expenditure would be much larger if the State desired to widen the road later after property had been improved along it. The Federal Bureau of Public Roads declined to approve a curved road leading around a house which would save $20,000 in the purchase of the right of way.

The route under consideration is the so-called Northern route around the Arlington National Cemetery and Fort Myer.

The highway commission had $100,000 in Federal funds and $50,000 in State funds available, but because the Federal funds could not be used for rights of way the money had been transferred to U. S. Route 1 to make three tracks and provide for an underpass on the Fort Belvoir road.

Spokesmen for Arlington.

Representative Howard W. Smith, Delegate William Medley and Mr. Garnett were the principal spokesmen for the big Arlington delegation attending the hearing. They emphasized that a road costing approximately half a million dollars was not an asset because it had a dead end only about two miles from the bridge.

Mr. Cammerer said the future expansion of Washington would be southward to a large extent. He pointed out it now takes about twice as long for a Government employe living at the northern edge of Washington to reach his office as for one living on the south side of the river in Virginia, and said this element of local transportation would play a big part.

Among those attending were Wade H. Massie, member of the State highway commission; Arlington County Manager Roy Braden; Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas, and Mrs. Elizabeth Magruder, W. A. E. McShea, Harry A. Fellows and Mr. Garnett, all members of the Arlington County board.

To Learn Status Of Road Funds

Commissioners Will Meet State Officials at Baltimore Today.

Members of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners will meet today with the Maryland State Road Commission to "see where the county stands on road finances." The meeting will be held in Baltimore.

The meeting, which is an annual affair, will give the county commissioners an opportunity to receive first hand information on what help they may expect from the State when they launch their proposed road improvement program.

Meeting at Upper Marlboro yesterday, the board received a letter from State Road Engineer E. G. Duncan at Hyattsville, answering the request tha the High Bridge Road near Bowie be retarred.

"I wish to advise you," said Mr. Duncan, "that on account of the very thin surfacing which was on this road it broke out very badly during the winter of 1933-1934, and during the early spring it became almost impassable. My office was flooded with a number of letters requesting that some immediate repairs be made on this road.

"We placed a Killifer disk on this road and scarified the badly damaged tar mat and put the road in fairly good condition, but before oiling can be considered it should be resurfaced with at least 6 inches of gravel or we will have a repetition of the 1933-1934 damage."

Further discussion of the distribution of the new county police, appointed Monday, and the set up of the patrol system, was postponed until next week's meeting. The commissioners, however, said they expected the four additional police would be divided equally between Marlboro and Hyattsville.

Fairfax Group Of Educators Compiles Book

First of Its Kind on Vocational Guidance in Lower Grades.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 243, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The first book written in the United States on "The Teaching of Vocational Guidance in Elementary Schools" has recently been completed by a group of elementary school teachers of Fairfax County, Va. This fact was brought out yesterday by State Supervisor of Vocational Guidance C. J. Hyslup, of Richmond, at a meeting of the Fairfax County School Board.

Hyslup expressed the appreciation of the State Department of Education for the co-operation of the county board in establishing the teaching of vocational guidance in the public schools. This work started in Fairfax County several years ago and is now part of the teaching in the public schools throughout the State. He declared that during his six years with the department the most outstanding work accomplished in this field had been accomplished by the teachers of Fairfax County. The new book written by the local school teachers will be a guide for teachers in this branch of school work.

The school board adopted a resolution yesterday requiring that children must be at least 6 years old prior to the opening of school in the fall before they will be allowed to enroll. The old ruling of the board required that they be 6 years old prior to January 1 of the school year.

Teachers in the county schools may be required to reside in the county or within 3 miles of the school in which they teach. This matter was considered by the board yesterday and most of the members expressed themselves in favor of such a requirement, but no formal action was taken.

A communication was received from the Federal Government offering to provide funds for the erection of county school biuldings. Of the total required for new buildings and improvements, the Federal Government will advance the entire sum, of which the county shall issue bonds for only 55 per cent payable over a period of 15 to 30 years at 3 per cent interest. The other 45 per cent will be donated to the county as a gift.

The matter was considered by the school board and a tentative outline of the immediate needs to relieve congestion in the schools revealed that approximately $125,000 would be needed by the school board. According to the tentative list the county needs a six-room school center at Woodlawn, additional rooms at Annandale and Chesterbrook, an enlarged high school building at Fairfax to accomodate the 500 pupils that will be enrolled in the school next fall. The high school completed last winter will not adequately take care of the classes expected this fall. The board instructed Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson to investigate the offer of the Federal Government, obtain plans from the State architect's office and, if approved by the school board and the county board of supervisors, the question of a school bond issue on the basis of the Government's offer will be submitted to the voters of the county at a special bond issue election.

The contract for supplying approximately 800 tons of coal for the county schools next fall was awarded to the Washington Fuel & Supply Co. of Rosslyn.

The board of supervisors of Fairfax County will hold its regular monthly meeting today in the board room of the courthouse. During the afternoon public hearings will be held on applications for permits to operate commercial hog farms in the county.

Floris Elementary School will close on Friday, June 9, when the following program will be given at 10 a. m.: Song, "America, the Beautiful;" devotional exercises, by the Rev. Joseph Hagins; hymn, "Be a Little Sunbeam," by the school; pageant, "Evolution of Our Flag;" song by school, "Our School;" playlet, "O Teacher," by the Good Speech Club.

Frederick Poteet, principal of the school, will present certificates to the following: Lewis Bartlett, James De Haven, Elva Bailey, Louise Dowden, Bertha Haines, Myrtle Haines, Lewis Downs, George Leith, Wayland McFarland, James McLearen, Bertha Kearns, Nancy Lockhart, Henry Thompson, D. S. Roadhouse, jr., Bentley Presgrave, Mildred Lilly, Margaret Starr, Robert McNair and Sarah Warren.

Benedict Hotel Manager Shot; Suspect Is Held

Victim, Seriously Hurt, Is in D. C. Hospital; Police Arrest Companion.

Ole Olson, 38, of Hughesville, who was shot Monday night on the veranda of a hotel he manages in Benedict, Md., was in serious condition last night at Emergency Hospital here. Audrey Jameson, 25, who was with Olson at the time of the shooting, has been released by La Plata police officials on $500 bond. Olson was shot in the stomach.

Olson told police that he did not know who his assailants were, but Deputy Sheriff Roberts, of Charles County, arrested Jameson and Sterling Uhler, 38-year-old States road department employe, who allegedly made a hurried departure together after the shooting.

Sheriff Russell Howard stated Jameson and Uhler denied any complicity, claiming they fled, each thinking the other had fired the shot. When arrested Roberts said the men were intoxicated. Uhler was released. Hearing for Jameson has been set for June 18, at La Plata, pending the outcome of Olson's injury.

Olson has been in business in Charles County three years.

Walker Resigns as Manager Of Montgomery Liquor Board

Action Anticipates Expected Appointment of Fusionist; Veirs Seen as Choice; England Urged for Election Post.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post,
1111 Oak St., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

John C. Walker, general manager and treasurer of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board, yesterday tendeerd his resignation to the county commissioners, effective June 29. No reason was given for the resignation.

Walker's contract with the board expires June 30, however, and it is expected that a Fusion supporter would be appointed at that time. Mr. Walker is a Democrat.

Mr. Walker will relinquish his office June 15, actually, since the board voted him a two weeks' vacation. His record in office has been exemplary and he retires with the respect of the members of both parties, officials added.

In the meantime, speculation was rife as to his successor. James P. B. Veirs, Rockville farmer, and Jack S. Eaton, of Chevy Chase, now a member of the control board, were understood to be outstanding candidates.

Veirs' Selection Indicated.

Selection of Veirs was indicated last night after an executive session of the three Fusionist County commissioners, who were understood to be discussing selection of Walker's successor.

County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlin, of Silver Spring, understood to be a supporter of Eaton, left the meeting in an apparent huff, while Commissioners Frank H. Karn and Charles E. King, who were understood to be supporting Veirs, left the room with expansive smiles, as did Edward Peter, counsel to the board, also a supporter of Veirs.

The name of the successor is expected to be announced at a meeting of the board of commissioners this morning. The commissioners recessed last night to continue the meeting today. The three Fusion commissioners refused to talk about the secret meeting last night.

Appointment of John Arthur England, of Rockville, to be clerk to the board of election supervisors for Montgomery County has been recommended by the Republican State central committee for the county, it was announced last night by Mrs. John A. Holmes, vice chairman of the central committee, and chairman of the board of election supervisors.

Leo Bender, Silver Spring, with law offices in Rockville, was indorsed to be counsel to the election supervisors. The indorsement by the central committee is considered tantamount to appointment, since two of the members of the election supervisors board are Republicans.

Mrs. Holmes was elected chairman at the organization meeting of the supervisors Monday. She is the first woman to hold such a job in the county, and is believed the first woman in the State appointed chairman of such a board.

A committee representing taxpayers of Gaithersburg, Md., one of whom was a member of the fire board, appeared before the Montgomery County commissioners yesterday to oppose continuance of the fire-area tax for the support of the Gaithersburg - Washington Grove Volunteer Fire Department.

The committee pointed out that the law provides that the commissioners "may" levy such a tax and not that they "shall" levy it. It also declared that since the fire department is a private corporation, public tax money should not be used to pay the debts of the department and that although the tax is collected only from residents of the Ninth Election District, residents outside the district without paying any money receive the same protection. No action was taken by the county commissioners.

Municipal taxes for Takoma Park, Md., will be increased 10 cents per $100 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, it was announced yesterday by J. Wilson Dodd, town clerk and treasurer. The increase, which will make the tax rate 95 cents, was voted by the town council after a long meeting Monday night.

The new tax rate is expected to raise approximately $45,000 during the fiscal year, Dodd stated. The majority of the funds raised by the 10-cent increase will be expended for street maintenance, he said.

Taxes are due July 1, and the bills now being prepared by Dodd for the coming year will be on the basis of the new rate.

The first and second degrees were conferred upon three candidates at a special meeting of the Germantown Grange last night at Germantown, Md. The class receiving the degree consisted of Milford Edden, Doyle Edden and Norman Runkles, all of Germantown. James D. King, master of the grange, presided.

The third and fourth degrees will be conferred upon a class of candidates from the Germantown and Shady Grove Granges at a special meeting June 13 at the Gaithersburg (Md.) High School auditorium. The degree team from the Germantown Grange will have charge of the degree work.

Charles Griffith and E. Francis McDevitt were nominated last night for presidency of the Silver Spring, Md., Lions Club at a meeting at the Recreation Bowling Alleys, G street northwest, Washington. Griffith now is first vice president and McDevitt secretary.

Other nominations presented by J. Howell Forsyth, chairman of the nominating committee are: Robert L. McKeever, first vice president; Paul Coughlan, second vice president; Richard Barker, third vice president; Raymond Williams, recording secretary; Edward C. Holmead, treasurer; Tallman W. Peel and Arthur L. Blakeslee to fill the places of Warner Pumphrey and Paul Coughlan as retiring members of the board of directors; Lowell Hendrick, lion tamer, and Edwin Warfield, tail twister.

Arthur L. Blakeslee is president. The election will take place June 17. The meeting last night was followed by a stag bowling party under chairmanship of Holmead.

One hundred and fifty adult pupils of the night music classes of Takoma Park, Fairland and Brookville, Md., schools will take part in a musical festival tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Brookeville school.

The affair will be conducted on the lawn of the school if weather is fair, otherwise it will take place in the auditorium. Mrs. La Vergne Fairchild, Takoma Park instructor, will accompany the numbers on the piano. Each school will present two chorus selections besides several solo and quartette numbers. Mrs. Joseph Hutton and Charles Musgrove will sing a duet. Soloists will include Janet Seible, Dorothy Greenleaf and Oland Hawkins. A social hour with refreshments will follow.

The school will close for the summer late in June.

Election of officers of the Little Theater of Takoma Park will take place today at 8 p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, 120 Chestnut avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Paul Burk, chairman of the nominating committee, will present a slate. John Guice Sutton is president.

Mrs. Mortimer O. Stabler was awarded sweepstakes and the most distinctive entry prize at sixth annual show of the Little Garden Club of Sandy Spring, at Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md.

A Penny Wise Business

THE American system of milk delivery provides its own invitation to emulation throughout the world.

To supply a thriving town or a sprawling metropolis with its morning's milk every morning, with no favors from the weather man, is a job to test all the resources of men and mechanisms.

With proof of performance regularly appearing on appointed doorsteps, the public takes punctuality for granted.

The fact that delivery is only one of the functions of the corporate milkman does not carry all the way from the processing plant to the customer's consciousness.

What is done to keep milk wholesome and healthful is a worth-while story of the productive partnership of science and industry.

That purity and promptness have exacted no premium from the consumer is traceable to the corporate milkman's closeness with costs—as a rule, the larger the distributor, the lower his delivery and administration costs per quart.

He is "penny-wise" in the best sense of that misunderstood quality of management.

State to Begin Setting Up New Welfare Units

Revising County Boards Expected to Require Month at Least.

Set-up of the new Prince Georges and Montgomery counties welfare boards under the Maryland Board of State Aids and Charities, as authorized by the recent session of the Legislature, will not take place for at least 30 days.

Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, said last night he would begin immediately to organize the counties of Maryland under the new system. Meanwhile, he has written all welfare board presidents to continue their organizations on the present basis.

The county boards will retain their present names. Members will be appointed by each local board of commissioners and the selection will be made from a list of 12 names submitted. The commissioners' boards also will assign one of their members to the new organizations.

Functions of the new welfare boards will be virtually the same as those of the old boards, the main difference being wider activities to include the control of old-age pensions and all lateral welfare functions.

Mr. Greenstein pointed out that Maryland, in delegating such broad powers to the Board of State Aids and Charities, was the first State to combine the administration of all relief activities under one board. Maryland is also the first State to place such a board under civil service, he said.

Takoma Park Women's Club Season Ended

Mrs. Biddle and Miss Ehrmentraut Are Guests of Honor at Luncheon.

The annual luncheon of the Takoma Park Women's club, held yesterday at Olney Inn, Olney, Md. and attended by more than 150 women, brought to a close the activities for the club year.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, newly elected president of the D. C. Federation of Women's clubs, and a member of the Takoma Park club and Miss Doris Ehrmentraut, first vice president of the Junior Women's club were the guests of honor. Encouraging the support of the club in the Federation, Mrs. Biddle, a former president of the Takoma club, said that the organizing of Junior clubs would be one of the most important and most valuable accomplishments she is looking forward to during her next two years in office. She announced that Mrs. Byron M. Coon who yesterday was installed as the new president of the Takoma club, would be the chairman of the Junior department in the Federation.

Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, retiring president, presided at the luncheon, introducing four charter members emeritus, Mrs. C. B. Smith, the club's first president; Mrs. Azro Cory, Mrs. Jerome Hubbard and Mrs. Homer C. Skeels, of Belleville, Ill. They gave remarks about the club's organization with 30 members 22 years ago, when the first meeting was held at the home of Mrs. C. B. Smith. It now has a membership of 250 women.

On behalf of the club's appreciation for Mrs. Pratt's successful guidance of affairs, Mrs. H. I. Houston presented her with a framed testimonial lettered by Mrs. Albert Spear.

In her greeting to the club, Mrs. Coon upon receiving the gavel from Mrs. Pratt suggested that prizes be given by the various departments for their finest accomplishments throughout the year.

The program included vocal solos by Mrs. Irving Clark, accompanied at the piano by Miss Helen Williams; readings by Mrs. D. C. Gordon and Mrs. Franc S. Caskey, and selection by the club's chorus under the direction of Mrs. Edmund L. Green.

Mrs. Alexander Weimore and Mrs. James A. Robertson, past presidents, congratulated the club for its activeness. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Edmund H. Graham, assisted by Mrs. Clarence Ross.

Lesson In The West.

The very country that for months baked beneath a parching sun without a drop of rain now is flooded by the swirling waters of rivers run wild. There is more to this than simply proof of the adage that Nature runs to extremes. There is in it a lesson for the country to learn in the proper use of land.

Although it may not have been a major factor, it is commonly agreed that improper cultivation of the Middle Western plains accentuated the effects of the drought last year. Acres had been cleared and cultivated with virtually no thought of conserving water. Drought left the whole country in a cloud of dust. When, at last, rain did fall it apparently fell like nothing seen before. Basins and reservoirs filled up but there was no vegetation to hold the superabundance of water. River courses, no longer large enough to contain their loads, overflowed their banks. When root fibers and protective vegetation have been destroyed floods are a natural consequence.

It needs no expert to suggest that what must be done is to revise farming practices in this area. That is precisely what has already been ordered by the Government through its anti-soil erosion agencies using, in part, public works funds. Not only will farmers be instructed in proper methods of contour-plowing and gully-ditching but legions of CCC boys have been assigned to terrace the land, dike the streams and transplant vegetation in the afflicted areas. It will be a long, tedious process to restore this country to its original fertility, if that is at all possible. But the objective is well worth the effort, as the lists of deaths and property losses from both flood and drought will amply testify.

Toll For The Braves.

Not since Achilles sulked in his tent has civilization watched one man's sulks as now it watches those of the mighty Babe. Mr. Fuchs dared forbid Ruth a day off to greet the Normandie—and the Braves are Babeless. Hope is to be detected in only one complication of the difficulty: while Emil Fuchs accepts Ruth's resignation "with pleasure," no less a person than Charles Francis Adams intimates that Mr. Fuchs' resignation would not leave the club inconsolable.

This Charles Francis Adams isn't the other Charles Francis Adams. The other was Secretary of the Navy, this one is Vice President of the Braves. Moreover, along with one race track and two hockey teams, he owns a controlling interest, or controls an owning interest, in the Boston baseball organization. And Vice President Adams is said to have served notice upon President Fuchs that the latter must either pick up the stock he is holding as collateral for a large loan and purchase all Adams' holdings at a bargain or get out of the club's affairs. It's all very far from the sandlots, but the point seems to be that if the clouting's over, the shouting isn't.

Anyway, it would be just too bad if the home-runner had at last run home to stay. It would be just too bad if President Fuchs should have applied that "imbecile" epithet worthily—if Ruth should have reached a baseball second childhood and, ceasing to be "Babe"—should—as Paul Gallico has suggested in the news-columns of this paper—become just a babe again. The Trojans won while Achilles sulked. But they didn't have the competition Boston faces in the National League.

Cloud Over St. John's.

No educational institution lies closer to the hearts of the people of Maryland than does St. John's College, at Annapolis, the third oldest college in the country.

Victim of many vicissitudes in its long and honorable history, it has of late years overcome great obstacles to forge ahead. Partly this is due to the strength of its traditions, partly to the caliber of its faculty and partly to growing realization that the small college offering unadorned courses in the liberal arts has a unique place reserved for it in the front ranks of present-day education. And, last year, when Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock was appointed president, hopes rose high that St. John's would not be long in re-asserting its rightful position among the leaders.

One of the absolute prerequisites for success in any college, however, is the complete separation of the teaching staff from the necessarily less scholarly influences that play upon every institution. Be it alumni, trustees or administrative officers, none can be suffered to inject extraneous considerations into affairs of the curriculum. Yet just such an untoward situation has developed at St. John's.

The case centers about a senior who failed in a final examination. The faculty is said to be all but unanimously opposed to granting him a diploma. The president, on the other hand, stands firm by his decision to graduate the student. In protest, one faculty member has already tendered his resignation.

Col. Woodcock's refusal to enter "a controversy" on the issue is unconvincing. For, if the reports are accurate, the controversy is of his own making. And controversy there should be, wherever and whenever careful educational standards are threatened by arbitrary action.

"Loss Leaders" Reappear.

Whenever a business man feels pugnacious, he can find an outlet for his emotions by discussing the legitimacy of the "loss leader" as a method of securing business at the expense of competitors. Whether he indorses or disapproves of the device, he is almost certain to find himself involved in an acrimonious and inconclusive debate.

Part of the difficulty is due to a failure to define clearly what is meant by a "loss leader." Strictly speaking, it means the sale of products at prices that fail to cover the costs of the goods to the seller. Of course, the latter expects to recoup such losses through sales of other goods to customers attracted by the low prices of the "loss leaders." However, the line between the bona fide "loss leader" and goods sold without loss at prices which less favored competitors are unable to meet is not sharply drawn. This is particularly the case when distributors, such as chain stores, are able to purchase goods in large quantities on terms that are more favorable than those accorded to small independent stores.

Naturally, the concerns injured by these practices are anxious to secure protection against price cutting. Often, too, manufacturers desire to maintain a minimum resale price for trade-marked goods. For years, indeed, abortive efforts have been made to secure passage of legislation legalizing the right of a producer of trade-marked or branded goods to enter into contracts providing for resale price maintenance. With the adoption of the national recovery act, various distributive codes undertook in one way or another to eliminate the so-called "loss leader" practice by requiring that distributors of certain products should not sell them below the invoice price plus certain allowed additions.

Since the Schechter case decision these protective devices designed to prevent sales below cost, and to eliminate loss leaders, are tending to disappear. While the economic benefits of the system of price control thus set up has been challenged, and while in many cases ability to enforce such rules has been lacking, advocates of the system claim that it has not only protected efficient small distributors against extinction, but has actually increased the volume of sales and lowered the general level of prices, because it is no longer necessary to offset loss-leader deficiencies. On the other hand, it is argued by those in favor of a laissez-faire policy that in many cases prohibitions against "loss leaders" simply mean that concerns with unduly high distribution costs will be protected against extinction and the public will pay the price of their preservation.

Probably the only way to form an intelligent opinion of the loss-leader problem is to study the conditions prevailing in specific industries and decide on the basis of available facts whether erratic pricing policies are putting out of business efficient concerns that ought to be permitted to survive. In an article on the page opposite, a good deal of light is thrown on this moot question in the case of the tobacco industry. Mr. Davis, who speaks with authority on that industry, states that the Supreme Court decision has thrown it into confusion by abrogating the executive order which fixed the prices at which certain popular brands of cigarettes could be retailed. According to Mr. Davis, the fixed "mark-up" which put an end to price cutting, has benefited thousands of independent retailers while increasing the business of wholesalers and improving employment in the industry. It is clear that the threatened loss of such social gains is a matter for widespread concern.

Camouflage.

In northern China there is much ado over a telephone line being cut. Simultaneously there come from the Eritrean-Ethiopian border reports of a clash between native troops. Both incidents are broadcast to the world as possible causes of war in these perturbed regions.

Telephone lines are cut by bandits in every country using this means of communication. The world at large hears nothing of either the cutting or the repairing. But vandalism of this type gives Col. Sakai, chief of the Japanese forces in North China, an excuse to stiffen his threats of further invasion. It would be more to the point if the colonel would explain why his forces are in an area where the Chinese are in a position to disable a Japanese military telephone line.

Rome observers explain that the 30 casualties inflicted on a post of native gendarmes will not become a spark in the Ethiopian powder barrel, at least not at present. The powder, it seems, is not dry. This wild region of Africa is just at the beginning of a rainy season. War would not be practical on a soggy terrain under dripping skies. So this incident will not be fanned into the flames of war.

In the meantime it would be interesting to hear Emperor Haile Selassie's version of the clashes in the Dancali and Gublei regions. For if incidents manifesting belligerency do not happen, they can always be staged. And any officer who couldn't manufacture a better excuse for an invasion than the destruction of telephone lines by Chinese bandits in their own country should take a lesson in the riotous art of propagandizing war.

A Deficit For Washington?

If present calculations on the basis of the conference report are correct, the District will end the fiscal year of 1936 with a deficit of $300,000. Since the District is forbidden to borrow funds in anticipation of tax revenue, this is an anomalous situation. Unless the Senate intervenes (there is no possibility that the House will do so) some local institutions may be left without operating funds near the close of the year.

The amount of the prospective deficit is not large in relation to the size of the budget. But the principle involved is of the utmost importance. The House and Senate conferees finally agreed that a budget of $40,548,000 was essential to meet the minimum needs of Washington in 1936. But a stubborn attitude on the part of the House conferees prevented an increase in the Federal contribution to cover in part the larger outlay. In other words, the conferees decided that increased expenditures will be necessary but declined to appropriate the Federal Government's share of the additional costs.

For a good many years the District has operated on a cash basis. Taxpayers here thus have escaped the interest charges that so heavily burden other municipalities. There are numerous reasons why this policy should be retained. Yet if Congress persistently refuses to make a reasonable allowance for the municipal service it demands of the District, inequitable tax increases will be the only alternative to accumulating deficits. With the Federal budget out of balance by $3,133,471,000, however, careless indifference toward Washington's budget is not difficult to understand.

Quite a number of urgent improvements must be deferred for want of funds. There is reason for gratification that schools under construction will be completed, that the poorly named "character education" experiment will be continued, that more policemen (however inadequate the number) will be employed, that the needs of the public library have not been forgotton, and that the employment center will be continued in operation. But other projects of equal importance must be neglected because a small clique in the House will not permit Congress to pay an equitable share of the National Capital's expenses.

For the fiscal year 1927 Congress approved a District budget of $33,743,244. Of this sum $9,000,000 was contributed by the Federal Treasury. Since then the obligations of the District have greatly increased, along with its service to the Federal agencies, but the Government's contribution has been almost cut in half. No justification for such a policy can be found and the only excuse which seems plausible is that a few members of Congress are trying to cover up profligate spending in other respects by clamping the lid tighter upon the voteless District of Columbia.

Reverse English.

"George Von Horse" reviewed the trooping of the colors, last Monday, the seventieth anniversary of his birth: George Von Horse, the King of England.

This statement, on the first page of a contemporary, must have caused many readers momentary bewilderment. They even may have wondered whether some unheralded rapprochement with Herr Hitler is under way. Queen Victoria, it is said, never quite mastered her "shalls" and "wills." The whole quartet of earlier Georges were accused of speaking English with a German accent. But why should their successor reverse evolution by taking on a "Von?"

It is an axiom of advertising experts that the calculated use of white space clarifies advertising copy. Certainly the uncalculated omission of a "white space" may make a mystery of headlines—when "George V on Horse" becomes "George Von Horse."

Ohio EPIC Scheme Fails.

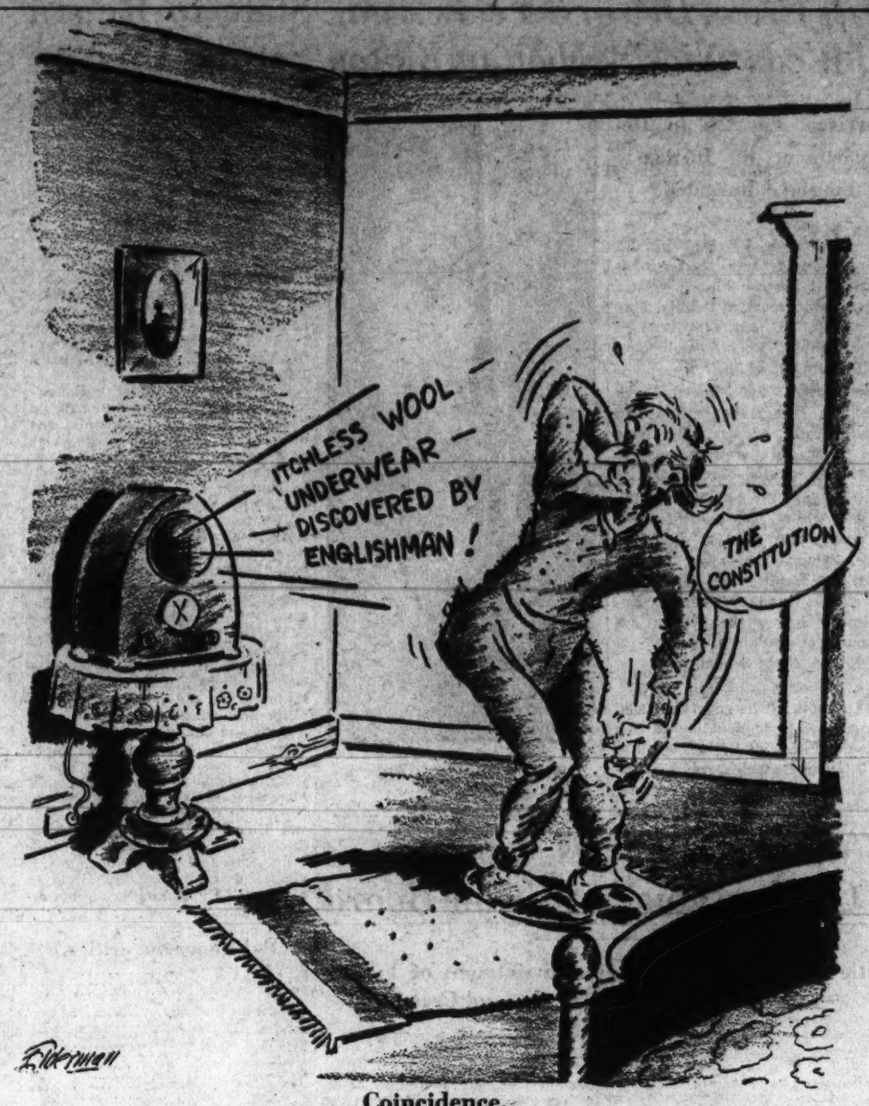
From the San Francisco Chronicle.

While the EPICS in the California Legislature are trying to bludgeon through their production for use scheme, the Ohio model, to which during the election they pointed with pride, has just gone boom.

Sponsored originally by Federal and State relief agencies, the Buckeye industrial cell is now in the hands of a receiver. The dozen plants in as many towns, operated by a State corporation, the Ohio Relief Production Units, Inc., have been shut down, and the Federal Surplus Corporation is trying to salvage what it can out of the wreck.

Giving employment to 1,500 persons at its peak, the production units could not compete with private industry. The volume was small, costs high and the products were substandard. Even the unemployed complained of the quality of the goods.

Thus another Utopian scheme on paper fails to stand the test of experience in the world of actualities.



Coincidence.

High Cost Of Speed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I was much interested in your article on the gains and losses of fast driving. You put it in terms of minutes gained as against risks involved.

There is another angle you did not mention—the extra money cost of fast driving.

You showed that the average car at 30 miles per hour will go 18.4 miles per gallon. At 50 m. p. h. it goes 13.1 miles per gallon. After going 13.1 miles you have to buy more gasoline to go the remaining 5.3 miles to arrive at the same place you would reach without more gasoline at the lower speed. In other words, you burn 1.4 gallons at 50 m. p. h. to reach the same destination that 1 gallon takes you at 30 m. p. h.

If gasoline is 20 cents per gallon the extra four-tenths of a gallon costs 8 cents.

In other words, you pay 8 cents more to go 18.4 miles at 50 m. p. h.

At 60 m. p. h. the extra cost is more than 12 cents, in gasoline alone, to say nothing of oil, and wear and tear on tires and car.

Confederate Pensions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Why should daughters of Confederate soldiers be put before the public as objects of charity while the Federal Government is still paying out hundreds of millions of dollars in pensions and compensation to soldiers and their dependents? In every war in which the United States has been involved, the soldiers and their dependents have been pensioned by Congress, except the soldiers who fought for the Confederacy.

For 70 years this country has been reunited, so why should this great Government continue an injustice by denying pensions to a few single orphan daughters of Confederate soldiers, some of them in very frail health and without adequate means of support but do not feel they should be humiliated by being compelled to accept charity.

For 70 years since the Civil War the Southern taxpayers have contributed to the pensions of all soldiers, and the South has given its own sons in the Spanish and World Wars.

Then why should not a sense of justice prevail to permit the Federal Government to provide for the needs of daughters of Confederate soldiers?

YOURS FOR JUSTICE.

What To Do With The Constitution?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A hundred and fifty years ago this country was in the midst of its struggle for ratification of the Constitution. The opposition took the form of demanding a new Federal convention to entirely rewrite the document. Gov. John Randolph of Virginia was instructed by his Legislature to transmit to Gov. George Clinton of New York a communication setting forth Virginia's willingness to confer with other States looking toward calling such a new convention. There was also much hostility in New York to the Constitution. But the communication arrived too late. The New York Legislature had adjourned. The resolution had been mailed in Richmond on December 27, 1787, it arrived at its destination in New York exactly 2 months and 11 days later. And historians are still wont to speculate on what might have happened to our present Constitution had its foes in New York and Virginia made prompter contact.

This incident, since the NRA decision, gives rise to another speculation. Can the theories of those founding fathers on the matter of the regulation of commerce be of much value in a day when a letter air-mailed from Richmond is at New York in a couple of hours, and the photograph of a happening in New York can be in every newspaper office in the land in a matter of split seconds? Can any document attuned to the leisurely, simple life of a century and a half ago be expected to harmonize with the rapid tempo of today?

DWIGHT T. SCOTT.
Washington, June 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There is a Spanish proverb which says in effect, "There is no evil which does not produce some good." This thought might well be applied to our recent Supreme Court decision, and rather than remain in consternation and confusion we should immediately avail ourselves of the knowledge which has been conveyed to us in this lesson.

The judgment of these "Daniels" is a blessing in disguise. Instead of accepting the decision as a setback in our social system of from 10 to 20 years, a constitutional convention should be called at once to revise the antiquated structure in such a way that some consideration may be given to human rights as well as property rights.

That the document has served us most beneficially in the past is without question; that when put to test it gives preference to property rights over human rights is recorded in every court; that its present form is a hindrance rather than a help to the human interests of the American people is obvious.

The Constitution continues, to a great extent, to hold its place of sacredness and infallibility in the minds of most people because we have been taught to look upon it in this light from early youth.

Washington, June 3. CUEVAS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The good old Constitution is good enough for me, but inasmuch as the favorite indoor sport now is to devise amendments, here's my fling: The U. S. Supreme Court to be empowered to appoint a counselor to each branch of Congress. The members of Senate and House must abide by the dictum of said counselor insofar as legislation's constitutionality is concerned.

A further check on the membership by rules committee of each body should limit discussion to duly approved constitutional measures. Obviously, the electorate will in future have to deal with candidates for Congress. No one should be allowed to have name on ballot unless he (she) takes an iron-clad oath to uphold the Constitution as it is. A violation of this oath to be made punishable by statute on the ground that such an offense is treasonable.

Business Must Decide.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

At last many business leaders have their wishes fulfilled by the latest ruling of the Supreme Court. But the decision should be looked upon as a challenge to business rather than a challenge of Government. If organized business is not able to find the solution to its problems it definitely will have sounded the death knell of "rugged individualism." Again it will be forced to seek aid and solace from a benevolent Government. Perhaps business will then be driven to a more severe bargain than that proposed by the late NRA.

The test of the new freedom will come in the ability of the majority of the business leaders to curb the regressive tendencies of a small minority. Continued wage cutting and price reduction at the expense of labor, such as has prevailed during the past week, can lead but to a repetition of mob violence even more extensive than that present in 1932 and 1933. The result may be the loss of the capitalistic system.

In the event that business leaders fail to satisfactorily adjust themselves and their industrial practices to existing conditions, the Government will be forced to intervene again. Its action may result in the following courses: (1) Extreme distribution of wealth and income; (2) strict regulation of industry, even to the extent of more drastic price fixing, or if necessary, (3) confiscation of private property. The choice ultimately rests with business itself.

Ready To Go Now.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In his message to Congress of January 3, 1934, President Roosevelt stated we were "building on the ruins of the past a new structure." Through a spineless Congress, President Roosevelt undertook the building of "a new structure." Legislation, at variance with his own promises and with American ideals, was enacted, and administered by names unfamiliar to the American people. Complete control over industry, agriculture, finance, communications, etc., was delegated to the President and almost unlimited funds placed at his disposal.

But the Supreme Court NRA decision ended that program. What President Roosevelt was pleased to call "the ruins of the past" proved to be so sound a foundation that neither he nor his brain trusters were able to overturn it. Constitutional government has been preserved and the rights guaranteed by that document upheld.

Let the President, by keeping his past promises, inspire confidence in his future word. Let him encourage the investment of private capital rather than continue a policy which is forcing billions into hiding and idleness. Let him give reliable assurance to industry that it will have its fullest cooperation and protection in every legitimate endeavor, and before the snow flies we will be well on the way to sound business recovery.

The country is ready and anxious to go forward. Only the Roosevelt Administration stands in the way.

R. C. SCHROEDER.

Who Knows?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Will you kindly enlighten me? Did this Administration and its collection of Brain-Trusters have to be told that the NRA was unconstitutional?

Or did they know it beforehand?

The Post Impressionist

"For Years And Years."

Post Office, Wednesday.

"OLD SOLDIERS"—so runs a song loved by National Guardsmen, though we never heard it from Regular Army lips—"never die!" The poet Horace must have been something even more than a National Guardsman: we are beginning to believe that he was never born.

You remember:

Italy is this year officially celebrating the two thousandth anniversary of Horace's appearance upon earth. Mussolini endorses the festival. The Italian Academy fosters it. The British Horatian Society and the International Classical Association "arrange appropriate programs."

And then that famous Horatian scholar, the Hon. Dr. Terrot Reaveley Glover, classical lecturer at St. John's, Cambridge, blandly evokes mathematical doubt.

He admits that Horace was born on December 8, 65 B. C., and that 65 plus 1935 makes 2,000. "But," says he, "how many years were there between 8th December, 1 B. C., and 8th December, 1 A. D.? Do you add the ones? Might it not be just as wise to use subtraction? If it is one year and not two, how many years are there between 8th December, 65 B. C., and 8th December, 1935 A. D.?

"This," continues Dr. Glover, "is one of the cases where it is safer to do it on four fingers than by arithmetic. I think classical people ought to leave arithmetic alone; they are safer with their fingers.

"How many years do you make it between 1 B. C. and 1 A. D?"

Well, Mr. Joseph Danziger, the Column's expert on German generals and German food, summoned a Chinese mathematician for enlightenment. And Mr. A. R. Dorroh—we apologize for having misread his flowing signature—offered another solution; a contrary one. Now he furnishes us a blue-print of his argument—and a new Richmond rides into this Bosworth Field.

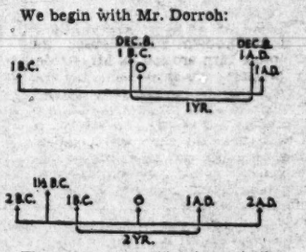
We begin with Mr. Dorroh:



That is his clarification of the subject.

But how about this one? It is from a G street scholar whose pseudonym is "Diogenes Hellagane:"

"In order that the ashes of Horace (Horatius Flaccus, I mean) may not be whirled away by the winds of controversy, I rush to the protection of those remains, and this notwithstanding the fact that both the poet and algebra made my head ache a half-century ago. Here you are!

"Interval of time equals later date less earlier date. B. C. years are minus, A. D. years are plus—by nature.

"B. C. Years=n, A. D. Years=n;
"B. C. Days=d, A. D. Days=d.
"Therefore we have:

n+d—(—n+d)
n+d+n=d

(d equalling d, in this case)

"And therefore np+n (or 65+1935)=2,000.)

"Quod," says Diogenes Hellagane, "erat demonstrandum."

But, after all, it is the French who are the real diplomats in these, as in all except diplomatic matters. Le Petit Journal, of Garden City, Long Island, says (in French, for it is an "Orange pour les Etudiants en Francais"—which you know as well as we do means an organ for students in French):

"The year 1935 is not a year particularly fertile in anniversaries . . . (However), in 1535 Rabelais published his Gargantua, and Michel-Angelo began his greatest work, 'The Last Judgment' . . . (and) in the year 65 B. C.—or, anyhow, about 2,000 years ago—there was born the greatest of the Latin poets: Horace."

It all makes The Post-Impressionist feel rather as John C. Rogers pictured him . . . And since, in these days so many columnists publish their alleged likenesses, why should our own appearance remain hidden any longer from our admirers?

The Grand Retreat.

THE more than 150 correspondents who crowded into Mr. Roosevelt's office yesterday had their greatest surprise of many a day. They had expected at least a trace of belligerency of last week, probably an announced effort to amend the Constitution, or, at the very least, a modified NRA regulating interstate businesses. The stage had been set for something dramatic and there was plenty of discussion about Mr. Roosevelt's superb showmanship.

A great and exciting day had been advertised on Monday. Yesterday morning there was a Cabinet conference, then later a meeting of the members of the executive council. Finally came the Democratic leaders of the Senate and of the House. And then the correspondents.

The announcement, in effect, was that the NRA is to be abandoned. That is to say, the NRA as we have known it, as a regulatory agency. What Mr. Roosevelt said, in effect was: "The opponents of NRA have contended it was thwarting recovery. OK, the NRA is now out of the way, go ahead."

• • • •

This, of course, measured fully up to the dramatic setting. But what the correspondents will be pondering for several days is why Mr. Roosevelt would dramatize this. Maybe things changed after the dramatic machinery had been set up; maybe Mr. Roosevelt in a spirit of sportsmanship decided to dramatize his retreat as well as his attack.

The reduced NRA is to function soley as a research agency until next April. Then it will report on the workings of business without the NRA. The Government is also to insist that firms with which it does business comply with the former codes and such NRA as is left will see to that compliance. This, however, is insignificant.

What is very likely is that NRA instead of waiting until next Tpril to report will report from time to time between now and then; that, in other words, it will keep the spotlight on the Nation's businesses through the very effective medium of publicity. It will be, in other words, the watchdog, and at first glance there is a question whether it will not do more good in this way than it ever did before.

• • • •

It will be several days before it will be known what caused the complete turn around on Mr. Roosevelt's part. It is a fact that his question of a campaign to amend the Constitution to permit the centralization of authority here in Washington did not get a favorable response. If this unfavorable response is what prompted him to turn completely around, to say, in effect, to business, "It's up to you now, go ahead," it was a very big thing to do.

There was only one sour note in his retreat, one that his worse enemies would permit under the circumstances. This is when he didn't want to hold out any "false hopes" to business that the reduced NRA would have anything to do with codes. But otherwise, he was most gracious in his defeat. He even greeted the correspondents with a joke about intending to address some French newspapermen in French.

• • • •

As an indication of how surprising the announcement was, and also a possible indication that plans may have been altered at the last minute, that Mr. Roosevelt possibly, after studying every conceivable plan of "saving NRA" had decided to throw away all but the skeleton, a Congressional leader had been quoted early in the day as saying the day's performances had been arranged to show "we still intend to fight."

There was not any suggestion of fight on the part of Mr. Roosevelt at all. He very admirably decided to let his opponents have their way. It was all so calm and unexpected that the newspapermen felt a decided let-down before he was halfway through. The thing that caused a ripple of excitement had not to do with NRA at all. In stating that legislation would be passed to take care of agencies originally authorized in the NRA act Mr. Roosevelt said, of course, the job of special adviser to the President on foreign trade would be abandoned on June 16. Everybody said: "Oh, oh, there goes George Peek." But it seems that George has also an import and export bank which he will continue to hold.

"O. K. then, tails you back up to Baltimore—heads I back up to Washington."

The Court And Cigarettes

Schechter Case Opinion Throws Tobacco Industry Into Confusion By Readmitting "Loss Leader" Selling; Employment Gained And Consumption Increased Under Blue Eagle.

The following article on the effect of code collapse on the cigarette trade was written for The Post by a member of the Baltimore firm of F. A. Davis & Sons, one of the largest wholesalers of tobacco products in the South.

By Francis A. Davis.

THE recent decision of the Supreme Court, outlawing the NRA, is much more than a matter of passing moment to those engaged in the business of distributing and selling cigarettes. There is probably no commodity which is handled in a larger number of retail outlets than the cigarette. It is found in stores of all classes and description—from the regular cigar store to the filling stations.

To understand what the NRA accomplished in this field it is necessary to examine conditions before the executive order of the President went into effect on July 16, 1934.

In the first place, bear in mind that the so-called "popular" brands—Camel, Chesterfield, Lucky Strike and Old Gold—are billed to the wholesale dealer at $6.10 per thousand, with a trade discount of 10 per cent, and a cash discount of 2 per cent. The net cost, therefore, is $5.38 per thousand, or slightly less than $1.08 per carton—a carton containing 10 packs of 20 cigarettes each.

This price does not vary—it is fixed whether the wholesale distributor buys one case (10,000 cigarettes) or 1,000 cases—so that the volume purchaser is not able to offer a cheaper resale price because of volume discounts. It is also well to keep in mind that no other manufactured product has reached such a tremendous volume of consumption as cigarettes—over 125,000,000,000 cigarettes were consumed in the year 1934.

The popularity of the cigarette has made it a product which can be easily sold, so that in many cases it has been used as an advertising medium, or a "loss leader," with which to attract customers to a store, in the hope that they can be induced to purchase some lesser known article, in which the seller has a "hidden" profit.

As a result, prior to the executive order, there was no retail price on cigarettes. The thousands of independent, oft-time small, dealers, were either forced to sell cigarettes at cost, the profit from which should have enabled them to make a living, or else have customers, whom, by every right, the dealer felt were his own, walk from the store. The purchase would then be made from some dealer who, engaged in marketing other lines at high profits, put a price practically at cost on cigarettes for the sole purpose of attracting that customer.

Moreover, the large chain store operator usually bought directly from the manufacturer at the same price as the distributor, while the independent dealer was forced to buy through a distributor who, in turn, could not afford to supply them at cost—because of the cost to the distributor of doing business. Salesmen, delivery equipment, etc., all have to be paid for. It is true, that to help the independent stay in business, many distributors did supply the retailer at cost in an attempt to keep him in business, hoping that some day something would happen to correct a vicious situation. The wholesaler meanwhile tried to protect himself by the addition of various side lines, but as such a large percentage of his business was in cigarettes this was only a temporary expedient.

The purchaser of cigarettes, while willing to pay a normal and reasonable profit to the dealer, is also human and is desirous of obtaining his "smokes" as cheaply as possible—with no thought of what the few cents difference meant to the dealer involved. There are cases on record where cigarettes costing $1.08 per carton were sold as low as 54 cents per carton.

• • • •

THE executive order fixed the minimum price at which cigarettes could be sold both from whoesalers to dealers, and at retail. This meant a price of $1.11 from the jobber—a mark-up of 3.1 per cent, and a retail price of 13 cents, or two packages for a quarter—with a special price by the carton of $1.20. This gave the retailer a gross profit of 7½ per cent on carton sales, and 11.2 per cent when he sold two packages for a quarter.

What was the result? It was immediate and beneficial to the thousands of independent dealers. In addition over 2,000 wholesaler distributors increased their employes by 6,000, and their annual pay roll by $11,200,000. No longer was the retailer afraid to quote a price to a customer for fear of hearing: "So-and-so down the street only asks 11 cents a package—you are a robber." They knew they could quote as low a price as any one—and still make a small and reasonable profit. As a result, during the existence of the order, thousands of customers left the predatory price cutter and returned to the independent, with whom they preferred to deal, all things being equal.

Was the consumption of cigarettes diminished, because of this situation? On the contrary the output in April, 1935, was about 10,698,000,00, an increase of 15.1 per cent over April, 1934.

• • • •

THE NRA is no more—only a few days dead—and what has happened? Already from New York come prices as low as 70 cents per carton at retail. Overnight the old conditions are returning—viewed with dismay and sinking hearts by the thousands of independent dealers.

It is amusing to see how the various business associations, decrying the NRA while it lasted, now are sending out pathetic pleas to continue its advantages by co-operative effort. As though co-operation had not been attempted before the NRA was thought of! If there are 100 dealers in a town handling cigarettes it takes all 100 to agree, to be effective—one man alone can create chaos in a few hours.

Also, some people in business must have a lower price, because the only basis on which they can attract a customer is a lower price. Must the thousands who are dependent on the sale of cigarettes see their small profits wiped out merely to satisfy a few "chiselers" who can not do business unless their price is low?

Again we are in chaos. Must the increased pay roll be reduced, and the above new jobs created be lost?

The retail and wholesale dealers are looking to President Roosevelt to again lead them out of the wilderness—they see salvation in none other.

For Those Who Spell

By

William Lyon Phelps

HERE is an excellent test to try on those who think that they can spell accurately and without hesitation. Dictate the sentence very slowly and let the various members of the family or each one of a group of friends write it down.

It is agreeable to perceive the embarrassment of a harassed peddler gauging the unparralled symmetry of a desiccated potato.

I wish there were more public tests of spelling in the public schools. In the lower grades of the schools when I was a boy, they frequently conducted spelling-down matches. All the boys and girls stood in line, and the teacher read off a list of words. It was sudden death. The moment you missed, you fell out and took your seat. It was an absolute survival of the fittest.

• • • •

I think it was a mistake to repeat the word. For example, if one child failed on a word, the same word was given to the next in line. I think a new word should always be given; since if one pupil fails, the next one has some information. Yet on that very method, I lost a prize when I was 10 years old. Four of us children alone remained. The girl on my right was given glottis, a word entirely unknown to any of us. She said glottice and went down; I said glottise, and died. Then one of the two survivors got it right, because there was no other way to spell it. The other one immediately died on wield which he spelled weald, instantly he was followed to the grave by the sole survivor, who gave it weild.

• • • •

Now I was especially strong on all the ies and eis, and would have eaten that word alive.

The most commonly misspelled word in printed books is ecstasy, which is very ofen incorrectly spelled ecstacy.

The most commonly misspelled proper name in Shakespeare is the philosopher Jaques, who is often spelled, even by good scholars, as Jacques.

Princess Mary Resting After Gland Operation

London, June 4 (U.P.).—Princess Mary, the 38-year-old princess royal of England, was operated on successfully at a nursing home today for a "simple goiter" ailment.

The operation was understood to have removed part of her ailing thyroid gland, which had kept her in poor health for some time.

Attending doctors issued a bulletin: "The condition of Her Royal Highness so far is satisfactory."

Physicians said the thyroid operation in expert hands ordinarily was minor and resulted satisfactorily.

The Princess, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary, is the wife of the Earl of Harewood.

Our House in Town

LIFT your eyes from this page, if you're at home, and look around you hard and sharp. Is your apartment or house (let alone all you could wish, but merely moderately and decently) provided with sun and air and view of greenery, with clean and efficient arrangement, with surrounding quiet and with fairly convenient access to your work and outside play? But you needn't blush overmuch. Not five in a hundred Americans can honestly answer "yes."

That is the way to think into such a sentence as this from Henry Wright's "Rehousing Urban America" (Columbia U. Press, $7.50)—"America's housing plant is relatively at the lowest point of any part of the national economic structure." A generality like that has to be brought in arm's reach. The fact that "scarcely half of our existing dwellings have even the barest minimum of sanitary or even comfort appliances, that full a third of our urban populations and most of our farm residents live in dwellings at least 50 to 75 years old," is not something off in Kamchatka—it describes us, right here.

And that is old stuff, and we all know it, and we hardly lift a little finger about it.

• • • •

TO BE sure, that's all most of us could ever lift. A while back the Daily News, in New York, after reporting Huey Long's remark that 59 per cent of the wealth in this country was in the hands of 4 per cent of the people, refused to believe the point. They up and called him a liar. Then they thought they'd have a look themselves and get him on the hip. They sent an investigator down to the Library of Congress here, and when he got back, the editors of the Daily News honestly and handsomely swallowed their words. They found he was quite right about the wealth of the country. In fact affairs were rather worse than he had said. For it was irrefutable that 96 per cent of the workers in the country make less than the $2,000 a year which is considered the basic minimum for decent human living!

A fact to give pause to a good many people, and to none more than men like Mr. Wright who want to see something better than a sliver of our people comfortably housed. But as he implies more than once, the architectural technician is not responsible for the whole state of the cosmos.

• • • •

WHAT, then, can be done? "Rehousing Urban America" is the most complete and valuable technical manual yet to appear in this country. From his long experience in the designing of dwellings and in the planning of communities, Mr. Wright speaks with authority on slum clearance and "blight" rehabilitation (the far more important problem of our decaying urban areas); on such present group housing as we have (Sunnyside Gardens, Long Island; Radburn, N. J.; Chatham Village, Pa.); on the foreign solutions and on the prospects for our future.

Even the layman will find it interesting to see how the simple rearrangement of separate houses into planned group quadrangles will increase sun and air and greenery enormously, or how the mere fact of an apartment house's proper orientation to wind and sun can double its livability. To the professional in the field, this book must be a necessity. The photographs, diagrams and charts alone make it unique.

• • • •

BUT there is one thing which needs airing, and that is the very sloppy thinking which most of us do about planned housing. For one, we tend to think that group community housing is vaguely and despicably "un-American." Mr. Wright is thoroughly justified in pointing out that the more enlightened repudiation of the fetish of every house for itself (and the resultant jerry-building, crowding and loss of amenity) is the repudiation only of a late nineteenth century practice. In reality, the proponents of group housing are going back to our own colonial tradition, where the village with its "common," its open arrangement, and its simple adequacy of services was as organically sound as we hope to make our twentieth century communities.

And for another thing, why this strange confusion of individuality and conformity? We think we are "individual" when we have a house with a different gable from our neighbor's, but the fact is that inside the two are as alike as two peas. And alike in an inferiority of design which group housing will find it easy to improve upon.

And what makes us shy from the surface appearance of uniformity in housing, when we are already one of the most conforming nations on earth? We drive a car which is the exact replica of 500,000 others—we're sensible enough to know that we get more for our money from that very fact—and yet we throw up our hands at gaining any like efficiency in house construction by like means.

People of Mr. Wright's abilities could do a lot more for us if we would first get such stupidities out of our heads.

Lindbergh Drops Post With Flying Company

Wilmington, Del., June 4 (AP).—Retirement of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh from active connection with Transcontinental & Western Air as technical adviser was announced today by Henry B. duPont, T. W. A. board chairman.

DuPont, confirming reports that Lindbergh's four-year service with the transport company had been terminated "for a time at least," said "it is certainly not true" that differences had developed between the board and the colonel.

The chairman gave "personal affairs and a desire on his part to be away from New York a great deal" as Lindbergh's reason for withdrawing from the technical post.

40-Hour Week Plan for World Dead at Geneva

Employers' Delegates Kill Scheme at Opening of Labor Session.

By the United Press.

Geneva, June 4.—The movement for a world-wide 40-hour work week suffered a severe setback at the opening session of the International Labor Conference here today.

Representatives of employers attending as delegates to the parley voted to oppose the projected international convention for such a brief week for labor in five key industries—coal mining, iron and steel, glass bottle manufacturing, public works and building construction.

The United States delegation's employer representative, Sam A. Lewisohn, of New York, and Gino Olivetti, of Italy, split with the rest of the group, announcing that the United States and Italian employers favored the 40-hour week.

Lewisohn said they would help draft such a convention, despite the fact the United States Supreme Court decision against the NRA program in America seemed to make enforcement of such regulations impossible on private industrialists.

However, as a result of the general decision to oppose the 40-hour week, the employers absented themselves from the conference committee drafting the convention.

The United States, even so, will be represented on committees preparing a convention covering the iron and steel industry and the building contracting trades, but will not be represented on the other three committees. This is due to a lack of qualified experts with the American delegation.

The action by the employers' delegates means the 40-hour international convention virtually is killed, at least for this initial session, because many of the official government representatives support the employers' move in blocking adoption of the agreement.

The conference opened by electing H. P. Cresswell, South African delegate, chairman. Forty-eight nations were represented, comprising 83 government delegates, 34 representing employers, and 34 for the Workers of the World.

March Protests Utility Tie-Up

Illinois Demonstrators Ask State Action in Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., June 4.—Protesting against the disruption of utility service, approximately 250 business men and city officials from 53 Southern Illinois communities carried a plea for action to Gov. Henry Horner in a march to the Statehouse today.

They demanded immediate restoration of gas and electric facilities, crippled for more than two months by a strike of utility workers.

Adopting the tactics of the two groups of "hunger marchers" who paraded to the Capitol recently to urge resumption of relief, the delegation marched around the Statehouse grounds and then moved to Mr. Horner's office. Judge R. W. Griffin, of Granite City, spokesman for the demonstrators, declared the stalemate has affected 200,000 persons and has forced many industries to shut down.

The Governor counselled patience and predicted the difficulties would be adjusted soon. Principals in the litigation—officials of the Illinois Power & Light Corporation and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers—have argued their differences in a conference here for two weeks.

Peiping Sees Japan Ready for Invasion

Belief Grows Army Will Move South Soon.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, June 4.—A widespread belief that Japanese military action is imminent southward of the Great Wall, aimed at control of Peiping and Tientsin, gained strength today.

It was learned that Japanese military leaders had informed Nanking government representatives here that Japan is not satisfied with Chinese efforts to terminate alleged anti-Japanese activities in the area.

According to the Japanese version Col. Takashi Sakai, chief of the Japanese garrison at Tientsin, urged Ho Ying Chin, Chinese war minister, "to undertake speedy action" to meet the Japanese demands.

Sakai further allegedly warned the war minister that further delays by the Chinese "may have grave effects upon the north China situation."

Vice Admiral Gengo Myakutake, commander of the third fleet in Chinese waters, has gone to Sing King to confer with Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

Italy Calls Naval Men to Help Transport Troops to Africa

By the Associated Press.

Rome, June 4.—The naval ministry tonight called 2,000 petty officers and specialized sailors from all classes to help transport the steady stream of troops and workmen flowing to East Africa.

Fired by reports of two new "incidents" along the Italo-Ethiopian frontier in Africa, Rome newspapers this afternoon said there could be no compromise in the conflict.

An official communique published today charged Ethiopian forces with attacking Italian native forces on the Eritrean border last Friday, killing 30, and driving off several thousand head of cattle.

The statement also said 30 Ethiopians were repulsed with unascertained casualties after attempting to invade the Italian military zone near Gublet in Italian Somaliland.

Although official quarters asserted the new conflicts need not necessarily prove to be the starting signal for the immense war machine Benito Mussolini has assembled in Africa, the tone of the newspaper comment was distinctly militant.

Front page editorials asserted the situation must be carried forward to its logical conclusion.

Three more steamships sailed for East Africa carrying soldiers and workers.

French Cabinet Fall Breaks All Records

Bouisson's ministry lasted exactly three days and 20 hours.

Edouard Herriot's "fall of the franc" cabinet shared the record with the pre-war ministry headed by Alexandre Ribot, which lasted five days each.

Danzig, June 4.—Steady exodus of capital from Danzig because of currency uncertainty today led the Senate to order an indefinite bank holiday and close stock exchanges and foreign exchange markets. All postal money orders beyond the Free City's borders also were suspended.

Certain foreign exchange institutions were permitted to remain open, but only for exchange of currency into Danzig gulden. Wages and urgent financial transactions are to be made under special regulations. High penalties are provided for violations.

Danzig was made a free city on November 15, 1920, under aegis of the League of Nations. From that time to September, 1931, when England abandoned gold, its currency was attached to sterling. After that it went on a gold basis, which continued until May 2 last, when the gulden was devalued by 42.37 per cent. The devaluation, together with a rise from 4 to 6 per cent in the discount rate, failed to halt the outflow of capital and today's bank holiday declaration.

President Greiser assured the nation over the radio there was no question of further devaluation of the gulden involved in the holiday. He added that Danzig's dependence on Poland had necessitated bringing the gulden into proper relationship with the zloty, a move that had been accomplished on May 2, when the gulden was devalued.

Deaths Reach 56,000 In India Earthquake

Quetta, India, June 4 (AP).—With the death toll in Friday's earthquake officially estimated at 56,000, relief workers wearing respiratory masks tonight dug into debris seeking thousands of bodies believed still trapped in the ruins of this city.

So appalling were the conditions that medical expeditions expressed the fear that an epidemic might finish the work of death begun by earthquake, flood and fire.

Friends Launch Move to Clear Cutting's Name

Attorneys File Denial of Chavez' Fraud Charges; Ask Vindication.

By the Associated Press.

Vindication of the name of the late Senator Bronson M. Cutting, of New Mexico, was sought by his friends yesterday as the Senate Elections Committee dismissed the contest brought against Cutting by his appointed successor, Dennis Chavez.

Chairman George said the committee will meet today to determine definitely the form of the formal dismissal. He indicated that some members of the committee favored a mere announcement of dismissal, while others wanted a more elaborate statement which would vindicate Cutting of election fraud charges brought in the Chavez contest.

A formal answer to the Chavez petition was read to the committee yesterday by Cutting's counsel, Huston Thompson and J. D. Atwood. They denied generally and specifically all allegations of illegal voting and election fraud. The committee also received a telegraphic request from counsel for Chavez requesting dismissal of the contest.

When appointed by Gov. Tingley of New Mexico, as Cutting's successor, Chavez announced he would not press the contest, but would stand for election for the four years remaining of Cutting's term.

Thompson explained to the committee the late Senator's lawyers had proceeded with the filing of an answer "because Senator Cutting requested us to prepare an answer and was thoroughly familiar with the facts contained in the answer.

"Our purpose, in view of what the petitioner (Chavez) has done, is to present to the committee the record we have gathered that you may clear Senator Cutting's name," Thompson said.

Carol Defends Rumanian Rule In Last 5 Years

King Asks World to Judge Him by His Deeds, Not Sentiments.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Chisinau, Rumania, June 4.—King Carol today looked back over the nearly five years since his dramatic return from exile to seize Rumania's throne, and said proudly: "Let the world judge by my deeds what I have done for the country in that time."

"Let it not judge me narrowly on the basis of my personal or family relations," the King said earnestly as he completed his five-day triumphant tour of the former Russian territory of Bessarabia, now part of Rumania.

"We all have the God-given right to order our own lives and follow our own sentiments. That person is not human who is without faults. Even kings and queens have them. Is not a world unkind to condemn a man for personal loyality to his friends?"

(The Rumanian monarch's reference to his personal relations was regarded as an indirect defense of his friendship with Magda Lupescu, Rumania's red-headed "uncrowned queen" whose years of friendship with Carol brought much criticism upon him and led to Queen Helen's divorcing him.)

Declaring his tour of Bessarabia had convinced him that province was permanently part of Rumania, Carol warned other nations not "to attempt to break that attachment, sealed with our blood (in the World War)."

Predicting Bessarabia in time would become one of the richest agricultural areas of the kingdom and declaring his confidence that Rumania would live in peace with her old adversary, Russia, which recognized Bessarabia as an integral part of Rumania, Carol continued:

"We have gone ahead by leaps and bounds until Rumania is the largest and richest country in the Balkans. But, despite our growth, we still have many problems to solve. With patience and courage, we shall overcome the problems; without patience and courage, even a king would be lost.

"Since I became king Rumania has made progress in every department of life. We live at peace with all our neighbors. We have built a great army, not indeed to attack others, but to protect our borders and help maintain international peace. We are making steady industrial and economic progress despite the world depression. Our people are united and contented as never before. Never before have we had so many material benefits of life.

Heart Disease Kills Dr. Notz, G. U. Official

Dean of Foreign Service School to Be Buried in Watertown, Wis.

Dr. William F. Notz, dean of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Servce, died suddenly yesterday of heart disease. His body will be taken this afternoon to his native home of Watertown, Wis., for burial. Services will be held at 2 p. m. at the home, 5422 Thirty-ninth street Chevy Chase.

Dr. Notz, who was in his fifty-sixth year, had a breakdown from overwork a few months ago but lately his health had improved. He was found dead in bed shortly before 9 a. m.

Dr. Notz had been on the Georgetown faculty since 1919, having assisted in advising officials of the university in organizing the School of Foreign Service in that year. He was the first professor of economics, head of that department and a member of the executive faculty. In 1923 he was appointed dean.

Former U. S. Official.

He had been special agent of the United States Bureau of Corporations in 1915 and continued with the Federal Trade Commission as chief of its export trade division until 1927. He also was widely known as a lecturer and was an international authority on cartels.

The University of Kiel was preparing to honor Dr. Notz as soon as his health would enable him to take a trip abroad. The Italian, Rumanian and Czechoslovakian governments had decorated him in recognition of his services as an economist and promoter of international relations.

Dr. Notz was educated at Northwestern College, Watertown, and continued his sstudies at the universities of Pennsylvania, Leipzig and Wisconsin, obtaining a Ph. D. degree from the latter. He taught at Northwestern from 1904 to 1914, and in 1929 Georgetown University made him a doctor of laws.

His former pupils are scattered in government and commercial positions in upward of 52 foreign countries.

Formed Economics Academy.

Dr. Notz organized the Academy of World Economics in 1932 and was its chairman. He also had written extensively on economic subjects, and was a linguist.

He was a member of the American Economic Association, the American Oriental Society, a past national president of Delta Phi Epsilon Fraternity, a member of Phi Gamma Mu, the Cosmos and Torch Clubs. He also was corresponding member of the Institut fur Weltwirschaft und Seeverkehr at the University of Kiel and of the executive committee of the Friederich List Gesselschaft of the Deutsche Akademie in Munich.

Dr. Notz is survived by his wife, the former Rebecca Laurens Love; three children, Ellen, William and Nataly, and three sisters, the Misses Minnie, Nataly and Cornelia Notz.

Railroad Rejects Equipment Bids

Offers for Maryland Line's Items Held Too Low.

Bids received for the equipment of the Chesapeake Beach Railroad, which recently ceased operating its Maryland line, have not met approval of the corporation, it was announced yesterday by Caesar L. Aiello, of Hyattsville, attorney for the railroad.

Aiello said the corporation valued the steam engines, coaches, rail, and other equipment at more than was offered in any of the bids opened Monday.

The owners of the one-track line that carried many Washington picnic parties to the bay resorts in days gone by will retain the three miles of the line from Seat Pleasant, Md., to the Potomac Electric Power Co.

The State roads commission has mentioned the possibility of its buying the old road bed to Chesapeake Beach and establishing a highway that will be approximately 10 miles shorter than the present route. However, it is doubtful funds will be available for such a project.

Trial Board Advises $100 Fine for Kimmel

The Police Trial Board yesterday recommended a $100 fine against Private G. E. Kimmel, of the Second Precinct, charged with five counts of alleged duty neglect. He was accused of failing to report for duty, failing to report off duty, failing to patrol his beat, failing to report for roll call and failing to report to his precinct station.

The alleged offenses occurred several weeks ago, it was reported. The recommendations were forwarded to the District Commissioners. Charges against Policeman John P. Hoffman, also of the Second Precinct, were postponed.

Youth Sentenced As Reckless Driver

Arrested After 75-Mile-an-Hour Chase to Alexandria.

A 90-day sentence for reckless driving was meted out yesterday to Kenneth Patterson, 19-year-old Washington youth arrested in Alexandria Monday after a 75-mile-an-hour auto chase on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway. C. Barton Phillips, United States Commissioner before whom he was tried, also bound Patterson over to the Federal grand jury on a charge of violating the Dyer act.

Park Policeman H. M. Berger seized the youth after he had leaped from a taxicab, dashed up an alley and sought refuge in an Alexandria house.

The taxicab driven by Patterson was stolen from Tenth and C streets southwest scarcely half an hour before Berger spied it racing down the Memorial boulevard, according to park police. It was returned to the owner. Patterson said he lives in the 900 block of Virginia avenue southwest.

Heavy Lunches Cost 25 Pct. in Accuracy

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 4.—Penalties of a heavy noon lunch on the first hour's work in the afternoon were given in scientific figures by Dr. Donald A. Laird, professor of psychology, Colgate University.

The penalties were drops of 6 per cent in mental speed and 25 per cent in mental accuracy, and 70 per cent more lapses in attention. These losses came after eating a heavy lunch, as compared with a light dairy lunch. Eight young men were the test subjects.

Cause of early afternoon sluggishness, Dr. Laird said, is the well known one of mental anemia after a heavy meal.

"There are obvious applications of the findings of this study," he said. "It may be wondered if more legislative speed and accuracy might be shown if the Senate restaurant took precautions against cerebral anemia."

D. C. Burns Trash As Emergency Act

Closing of Commercial Dumps Met by Officials.

To meet the emergency caused by the closing of the commercial dumping grounds in Arlington County, the District Commissioners yesterday authorized the refuse division to dispose of commercial trash in the District incinerators.

All trash of this nature, which originates in the District, may be brought to the incinerators. The supervisor of refuse was authorized to enlarge his laboring forces to handle the increase in work.

The money for these operations this month will be taken out of available funds. A deficiency item, to pay for handling the trash during the next fiscal year, will be sent to the Bureau of the Budget.

Tourist's Auto Plundered.

Clothing and property valued at $800 were reported stolen yesterday from the automobile of Mrs. Mary H. Stone, of Saginaw, Mich. The machine, she told police, was parked in the 1700 block of Lamont street northwest. Thieves smashed a window to gain entrance.

Adventist Pastor Warns Youth Against Amusements, Radio

Rev. W. E. Barr Declares Jazz Orchestra and Theater Evil Institutions.

A warning against certain radio programs and against other forms of amusement was sounded yesterday by the Rev. W. E. Barr, chaplain of the Washington Sanitarium, at a camp meeting of the Potomac Conference of Seventh Day Adventists in Takoma Park, Md.

He laid down seven precepts to the young people as follows:

Amusements are harmful when they injure the body by keeping one out late at night; when they injure the mind, as in the reading of salacious literature; when they injure the morals by unclean thinking; when they endanger Christian devotion by keeping one away from prayer meeting, worship or Bible study; when they lead to association with evil institutions, or evil people, such as love for pleasure, and take away the desire for honest, honorable work, and when they interfere with the serious business of life.

The radio, he said, had enticed many listeners to the theater and now they are lost to the church.

Fish Laboratory Goes to Md. Campus

University to Begin Technological Research.

Technological laboratories of the United States Bureau of Fisheries will be transferred from Gloucester, Mass., to the University of Maryland, it was announced yesterday.

Frank T. Bell, commisisoner of the bureau, said the personnel and equipment will be brought to College Park June 25. The laboratories were maintained in Gloucester by a group of business men who paid the rent for the housing space.

The group was no longer able to continue the payments, Bell said, so the bureau decided to accept an offer from the university to use facilities available there.

The laboratory conducts various experiments dealing with fish oil and other scientific problems relating to fish found in the waters of North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey and Maryland.

2 More Spots Begin Outdoor Season Tonight

Chevy Chase Lake and Broadmoor Launch Summer Terraces.

By Kay Ware.

More night spots move out into the open, little daunted by persistent rainy weather. News of the day concerns Chevy Chase Lake, where festivities start tonight, under new management and the music of Lee Fields and his ten-piece orchestra. His greatest claim to fame lies in the numerous college proms for which he has played. Leith Williams, Alabama contralto, sings vocals.

The pavilion, bandstand, lighting, grounds, and terrace have been improved. Dancing from 9 to 1 o'clock each night except Sunday.

The other important opening is the Broadmoor Terrace on Connecticut avenue. This spot is one of the loveliest in the city—a huge terrace overlooking the park, with trees hanging high above your head, the sound of crickets and katydids below. A low wall marks a drop of some 30 feet directly into Rock Creek. Breezes are guaranteed.

Suggestion: That you get out to the Shoreham tomorrow to see the Cuban rhumba dancers, the Reyes. They have just come down from New York, where they danced at the Normandie ball. Meanwhile, the Five Voltaires, smart dancers, and Ferry the Frogman head the entertainment bill at the newly opened Terrace.

Not to be forgotten is the outdoor balcony-lounge, from which you get a fine birdseye view of the show with no craning of necks.

At this time—impressions of the Powhatan last Friday night . . . Pete Macias, tapping a rhythmic stick in the rhumbas, and looking brown and healthy after his vacation . . . Virginia Macias, his sister, in ice-green taffeta . . . Nice way of fixing her hair, all braided into a crown around her head . . . Mr. and Mrs. Morris Kafka, with smiles and greetings . . . Powhatan Manager Harnett with an oval table-full of guests. British is Manager Harnett, and very gracious . . . debs and subdebs, and newly married society matrons . . . lovely lady with gardenias in her hair . . . John Mayo, of WRC, dancing between announcements for the broadcast . . . Mr. and Mrs. Guy Scott, of Club Habana, Arlington Roof, up to look over their chief competition. He spoke a piece on the air.

Ramon, immaculate in blue coat and white flannels, who distributes superlative "good evenings" and "good nights" . . . Marty Rubin and the peppiest singing he's done in months . . . outdoor air, perhaps. . . .

Moths and smoke drift into the path of the spotlight . . . A newly painted flagpole bears the Powhatan's banner. Manager Hartnett painted it himself . . . Sort of a ritual . . . A star or two, yet no worry of rain . . . Green plants in boxes along the wall . . . Yellow lights of the city beneath.

A fine evening . . . And thanks, Pete, for the swell tango.

Air-cooling is well under way at the Mayflower Lounge, minus drapes and carpets, plus Sidney's men in white linens. Change of temperature is noticed in arguments over mint juleps. Should there be rye or bourbon, crushed mint or whole leaves, honey or rum as a fancy addition. Teddy says it makes no difference—each julep according to the taste of the customer. New type is a "Major Bailey" made with gin.

Lotus show: "Manhattan Madcaps," otherwise the chorus; Lenova and Martin (he was once with Pavlowa), Allie and Sylvia, another team; Pat Malone with buck dancing; Judy Ellington with Southern accents.

Air-cooling system pours breezes across the floor.

Madrillon's show: Lita Santos, dancer from Madrid, with "Mexican hot dances" and her own vocal accompaniment; Hurwyn and Miller, comedy team, present their version of "Carmen" and West Point; Jack Schaeffer clowns, Ross Del Roy and Ray Donahue sing, and Leon Brusiloff fiddles.

Irvin Tavern (opened last Friday) is lined with comfortable booths and plain tablecloths. Music by the Tavern Syncopaters; Vera Miller tap dances; Rose Adams sings and Mary Zimmer plays piano and accordion. No cover charge. Popular prices.

Florida moss decorates the dance floor at Greater River Bend. Native trees were used in the construction of the new addition. Food is prepared by Virginia cooks. George Reese and his Melodiers furnish music.

Meyer Davis' Orchestra, at the request of Mrs. Roosevelt and the President's mother, was selected to play for the two balls aboard the S. S. Normandie last night and tonight. No wonder—since Meyer is practically a White House institution, having played at parties there since the Harding regime.

Hoorays! Here Are the Reyes

This Cuban dance team opens at the Shoreham Terrace tomorrow night. Theirs is the distinction of dancing at the S. S. Normandie ball yesterday.

Officials Weigh Sample Census Of Unemployed

Rural and Urban Questionnaires for Six States Are Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

Sample counts of the jobless in six States were disclosed yesterday to be the weather vane yesterday signal whether a full census of unemployment will be taken throughout the country.

While formal approval has not yet been given by the works allotment board and President Roosevelt, authoritative officials said the plan had been worked out by a Cabinet committee and laid before the President informally.

Final approval of the plan to spend $455,000 in taking the sample census was looked for within the next few days.

Director William L. Austin, of the Census Bureau, declined to discuss the plan, but it was learned that the questionnaire, as submitted to the President for final approval, included: Inquiries about the relief status and needs of persons in areas set aside for the count; information on their working ability and qualifications, and questions that would be designed to give data that would be helpful, particularly to the relief and land resettlement sections.

The sample count would be taken in three urban and three rural areas. The urban districts decided upon were Waterbury, Conn.; Evansville, Ind., and Sioux City and Woodbury County, Iowa.

The rural census would be in McLennan County, Tex.; Athens, Meigs and Vinton counties, Ohio, and Washington, Choctaw, Clarke and Monroe Counties, Ala.

The questions were prepared by Isador Lubin, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Corrington Gill, an assistant director of the Relief Administration; Stuart A. Rice, of the Census Bureau; L. C. Gray, of the land planning section of the Agriculture Department; W. H. Stead, of the United States Employment Service, and Morris A. Copeland, of the Central Statistical Board.

Chewing Gum, Soda Intrigue French Youth

Lindbergh Plane Is Biggest Thrill on Visit to Washington.

A taciturn, rosy-cheeked lad of 14 stepped off a transport airplane from New York yesterday morning and immediately was surrounded by youngsters his own age, who were eager to be friends with him. But the boy might as well have been on a desert island. He could speak only French. The other boys and the handful of men with them could speak only English.

Nevertheless Roger Echegut, "ambassador of good will" from the children of France to the children of America, had a splendid time during his day in Washington. He said so last night through an interpreter when he visited the Washington Boys' Club.

Earlier in the day he was taken to Mount Vernon, Arlington Cemetery, to the Willard for luncheon, to the White House to meet the President. But the biggest thrill was seeing the Spirit of St. Louis, plane in which Lindbergh made his solo flight to Paris.

He Chews And Chews.

Everywhere the stocky French lad went he was accompanied by Jacques Fransales, American correspondent for the Paris Soir, and by the chewing gum given him on the plane for the flight from New York. Roger chewed and chewed. He confided through Mr. Fransales that his teacher in Paris considered gum "disgusting" and gave him a zero everytime she caught him chewing it. But yesterday the teacher was far away. The jaws of young Echegut (pronounced Eshshay-goo) worked vigorously as he wandered through Mount Vernon.

The home of the First President struck him as "rustic, very rustic, but nice." He was much more enthusiastic about the griddle cakes he had had for breakfast and the ice cream soda of the night before. Both of these American dishes were new experiences for Roger.

Came on Normandie.

Young Echegut came to New York on the maiden voyage of the Normandie. At Hoover airport yesterday morning he was met by Charles M. Fyfe, director of the Boys Club of Washington, and Charles Justice, honor boy of the club.

Roger won the trip to America through a contest conducted by the Paris Soir to find the typical boy. But he explained yesterday "luck had nothing to do with it." He modestly admitted he is "the most typical boy in all Paris." When he returns home on the Normandie on Friday he will be accompanied by a typical American boy—Peter Dudan, of the New York Boys Club.

But before sailing time Roger is to meet Al Smith, Joe Penner and Babe Ruth. He seemed much more interested in hanging on to his chewing gum and getting another ice cream soda.

I guess that no actor in the world has worked so steadily as Bill Gaxton, light comedy star of the smash hit "Anything Goes."

DEMPSEY.

In an unbroken line Gaxton worked a year in "Connecticut Yankee," a year in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," and a record ten weeks at the Palace. By this time, other actors regarded him morosely whenever he appeared at the Friars or the Lambs. With two years and ten weeks of constant employment under his belt, Gaxton next showed up in "Of Thee I Sing," and this one cracked all records by playing 89 weeks and winning the Pulitzer Prize. From that Gaxton turned to "Let 'Em Eat Cake," and even though this was a flop, he earned 23 weeks' salary before it folded. Now he is in "Anything Goes" and it has been going for 30 weeks with no sign of a stop. So Gaxton has worked four years, seven months and ten weeks, and it's come to a point now where other actors won't even talk to him.

However, there's more of a story to Gaxton's lengthy engagements than a mere recital of statistics. I don't know of any one who had a better opportunity to size up Americans during the lean years of the depression than this same performer. The morning that "Fifty Million Frenchmen" went into rehearsal, he wanted to hand in his notice. That was the morning that the stock market took its first terrific drop and Gaxton lost his life savings of $80,000. He didn't feel like singing or dancing, even to Cole Porter music. But by sticking it out, Gaxton not only experienced the early phases of the depression, but sang and danced his way through all of it.

"I think that Americans are the gamest people in all the world," he tells you. "I saw all of the big shots, the ones who were most badly hurt, and I never met one of them who let out a single squawk. True enough, when I'd leave the theater nights, I'd often pick up the paper and read that some of my best pals had plunged off a hotel roof. Some of them preferred to go out that way. Most of them, however, kept their chins up for the full route. How they stood up under the punishment dealt out to them in Wall street I'll never know, but they never let on." According to Gaxton, audiences during the most depressing days were the easiest to make laugh. "It seemed as though they wanted to laugh, desperately," he says, which is a problem for the psychiatrists. Backstage, in the dressing rooms, he experienced the change, too. Most of those who came back to see him wanted to sell limousines or sublease expensive apartments.

Item: Jack Dempsey, cuffed around by those who disagreed with his decision in the Ross-McLarnin fight, is very upset by it. According to Dempsey, it seemed to him in the ring that on two occasions McLarnin was on the verge of being flattened. The thing that really upset Dempsey was Gene Tunney's statement to the papers that McLarnin should have received the decision. Dempsey doesn't say so, but from his attitude you can tell that he feels this was a bit unethical.

Capital Society Throngs Party for Mme. Lebrun

French Embassy Is Scene of Reception for 'First Lady' From Paris; De Laboulayes, Hosts, Are Welcomed Back From Europe.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Even in early summer, a time usually dull in most cities, Washington is an excellent place to live, and almost every day welcomes distinguished visitors from foreign lands. The latest visitor is Mme. Lebrun, wife of the President of the French Republic, who has been in the Capital for a brief visit at the French Embassy, where yesterday afternoon the Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye entertained at a reception in her honor.

The de Laboulayes, among the most popular members of the Diplomatic Corps, have just returned from a sojourn of several months in France, and so the reception yesterday served the double purpose of giving guests an opportunity to welcome the return of the Ambassador and his wife and to greet Mme. Lebrun. The winding staircase of the embassy was lined from 5 until 6:45 o'clock yesterday with guests eager to meet the visitor who had come to this country on the maiden voyage of the new queen of the seas, the French liner Normandie.

Pink gladioli in great profusion were used in the drawing rooms and on the buffet, and Mme. de Laboulaye, wearing an afternoon gown of black chiffon printed with bouquets of brightly colored flowers, received with Mme. Lebrun, the Ambassador and Mme. Bernard, wife of the Minister of Marines of France, M. William Bernard. Mme. Lebrun wore a gown of pale gray chiffon trimmed with gray lace, handsomely embroidered, and a large black hat, while Mme. Bernard was in an ensemble of navy blue sheer crepe with a knot of scarlet flowers at the throat, and a smart navy blue hat. Among the guests were Mme. Jean Lebrun, daughter-in-law of the President and Mme. Lebrun, who wore an ankle-length afternoon frock of pastel blue crepe, with a jacket of the same shade, and a large hat of pale blue, trimmed with navy blue, and Mme. Freysselinard, daughter of the President and Mme. Lebrun, who was in a frock of pale beige crepe with a corsage of amber-colored flowers, and a large hat of natural straw.

Embassy Ladies Assist.

In the dining room, where most of the guests gathered to taste the champagne punch, and the truly French pastries of which there was a great assortment, ladies of the embassy staff assisted. The two sisters of the first Secretary, Mlle. Simons and Mlle. Madeline Caucheron were there, the one in brown and white printed crepe, and the other in navy blue with a large white hat; also pretty Mme. Saint, blonde wife of the attache of the embassy, in a white crepe frock with an enormous black hat, and Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache; Mme. Sable, wife of the Naval Attache, and Mme. Champsaur, wife of the Air Attache, all busily making the guests happy.

Most of the chiefs of mission were there with their wives, the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil, the latter in a charming frock of brown and white, with a large leghorn hat trimmed with a crisp brown ribbon; the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther, smiling and genial; the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon, the latter in beige trimmed with brown; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Munir; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demitros Sicilianos; the Minister of Czechoslokakia and Mme. Veverka, the latter wearing a frock of gray-blue, with a hat of gold color which matched the buttons on her gown; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, the former chatting with Mme. Freysselinard; the Minister of Rumania, Mr. Charles Davila deep in conversation with M. Jules Henry, Counselor of the French Embassy; the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted; the Minister of Bolivia, Senor Don Enrique Finot; the Minister of Hungary, Mr. John Pelenyi, and others from the corps.

Mrs. Hull Attends.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was there in an ensemble of sheer black with a large straw hat; tiny Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, in a dainty pastel printed chiffon; Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, in a white crepe frock with a jacket of red and white print, and a white hat; Mrs. Wilbur Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, in pale pink and blue chiffon, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol.

Also there were the wives of several Senators—Mrs. Warren Austin, in crisp white linen with a wide brimmed white hat trimmed with field flowers; Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, in black chiffon trimmed with pink, and Senator and Mrs. Robert Bulkley. Senator Arthur Capper was another guest.

Representg the House were Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Representative Caroline O'Day and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers. Mrs. George Barnett, wearing a frock of gray with a matching hat trimmed with purple violets, was there, as were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, in green printed chiffon; the Misses Patten, three of them; Mme. Van Kaathoven, Gen. and Mrs. Peyton March, Mr. Theodore Marriner, Counselor of the American Embassy in Paris, who came on the Normandie with Mme. Lebrun and her party; Mr. John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, in black and white with paradise feathers in her hat, and wielding a tiny fan; Mrs. Frederick Gillett, Mr. and Mrs. William Franklin Sands, Mrs. Leland Harrison, wife of the United States Minister to Rumania; Mr. Robert Woods Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, and Judge and Mrs. Crawford Biggs.

Mme. Lebrun and her party will go to Mount Vernon this morning, accompanied by Mrs. Hull, and at 1 o'clock the First Lady of France will board the train for New York, where she will take part in numerous entertainments planned in her honor, until she sails Friday aboard the Normandie for France.

Liquid Powders Solve Summer Freckle Worry

Now You Can Have New Set of Eyelashes Without Any Trouble.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S ALWAYS that prelude to the party. It's pleasant or unpleasant, all depending. Out of the closet comes your evening dress. It's just been cleaned and pressed and it's literally primed for a whirling good time. Your slippers, too. Cinderella-ish to the last degree! What a gay time ahead!

But, alack-a-day, you turn to the mirror and your heart gives a leaden plunge. There's a sprinkling of newly acquired freckles across your nose. There's a nest of little blemishes on your chin. Here it is the eleventh hour and what can you do to save your face? There are no fairy godmothers to wave magic wands. Alas! But there are beauty experts who take every emergency into consideration and who try desperately to give you the quick, last minute beauty aids when the occasion arises.

In this instance new hope is born in your heart when you contemplate a certain complexion balm which fulfills your fondest expectations. This is a fragrant liquid powder for your face, neck and arms.

Unlike the average preparation of this type, it bears no resemblance to flour-thickened water, which cakes as soon as it is applied. No, siree! This is a thin, soft-feeling liquid that spreads with a marvelous smoothness. Once on, it conceals blemishes, freckles and discolorations and imparts a pearly luster to your skin. In fact, it's almost a new skin in itself.

This balm is so exquisitely fine it will not clog the pores or give your face that smothered, blanket-like sensation.

Of recent years there has grown up a prejudice against liquid powders, both because they go on so clumsily and because, in many instances, they prove drying to the skin. Hail one that's free of either shortcomings. The specialist who makes this preparation absolutely guarantees that it will not prove drying. And you, in half a second, can see how beautifully it goes on.

For perfect assurance all summer long that freckles and blemishes will not mar your appearance, do keep a bottle of this complexion balm close by as a ready and willing friend.

Here's a Soap Bargain.

There are so many soaps, all colors, sizes and types—that it's impossible to say dogmatically "This one—and no other—is the best!" But it's perfectly possible to point to castile soap and say, "This is certainly very good!" It's pure, pure enough for a baby's skin. It's adaptable. It's a good bath soap, hand soap—and melted, makes a grand shampoo. All in all, it's one of the best soap stand-bys on the market today.

That's why hundreds of Washington women are going to be enthusiastic over the special sale of it in a local store. Here you can buy a four-pound bar, cut into 15 cakes, for only $1.50. This comes to you boxed and wrapped in celophane.

Along with your purchase, you're given, free of charge, a sample cake of soap and also a sample package of shampoo.

Since this is a very special sale, don't put off buying—for it's a grand opportunity here for a short time only.

New Eyelashes, Cheap.

The time has long since passed when a woman looks with despair at a skimpy growth of eyelashes and bemoans her fate to high heaven. Now if she can't grow them, she buys them, long, luxurious and, to all appearances, natural lashes.

They've been so perfected that they go on easily—and stay put. No danger of dropping them in the soup or losing them with the slightest twinkle. When they're on, they're on to stay until you remove them as the directions say.

There are two types of such lashes. You may buy them strung together so that you simply fasten the strips to your lids by means of a transparent slip and a bit of glue. You need a microscope to tell they didn't grow there!

Or, there's the other type of singles. It takes patience to apply these, but the results are well worth it. Each lash must be glued on by itself. In this way you can thicken the natural growth where you like and achieve highly satisfactory results.

Contrary to general opinion, boxes of lashes are modestly priced at only $1.

Twissors.

Query—I have heard of a new type of tweezer which has scissor handles and is quite easy to use. Can you tell me where I can purchase this?—T. R. S.

Answer—You refer to the new "Twissors." Please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and we'll be glad to forward names of stores where these are available.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I should like to make answer to a query voiced through your column Saturday, May 25. You probably recall the letter, signed "One-of-Many," written by a young man ready to enter college, who asked advice on how to make the most of his opportunity for "higher education," and who admitted he is not yet sure what trade or profession he wants to take up.

I think the young man of high school age who has a definite goal in mind, who knows what line of endeavor he wants to pursue after school days are over, is the rare exception.

• • • •

Of course, it is apparent "One-of-Many" wants a college education. I say, let him have it, by all means. I wouldn't force a young man to go to college if he had no desire to do so. But this boy will profit by college education for the simple reason that he believes a college education essential to success in life.

• • • •

Does "One-of-Many" have a distaste for mathematics? If he does, then let him avoid the technical courses and pursue an arts course. If he is not mathematical-minded, he will probably do much better in the legal profession, say, rather than in engineering or medicine. These are the three outstanding professions beckoning to the average college man. However, if he has no desire to pursue one of these three professions, that still does not preclude his going to college to improve his mind, broaden his interests and open his eyes to new occupational opportunities.

• • • •

A MAN in any walk of life, in any business or profession, has a definite advantage if he has a college education. In the first place, he is equipped to cope, socially, with personalities and situations. College will have taught him what tactical mistakes to avoid. The mere living in the atmosphere of college will have taught him poise and self-reliance.

• • • •

As a man now in college, I must say I can't remember any of the things I presumably learned in high school. Therefore, I am afraid they would be of little help in any business I might hope to enter. College enables us to arrive at a broader, less personal interpretation of such problems as arise to confront us in life. We learn there is more than one correct answer to many of the conundrums we must solve. We learn to temper our ideas, prejudices and ambitions in the light of increased knowledge of the world in which we live, and often are helped to make a wiser adjustment between our ambitions and our mental or physical qualifications. This last is one of the biggest advantages of college education, in my opinion.

• • • •

The high school graduate who, like "One-Of-Many," doesn't yet know what he wants to do in life, is the one who stands to get something valuable out of college life, providing he goes with a sincere, hard-working intention to make the most of his opportunity. He will find himself working out his own answer to what he wants to do during his college days. His gradually increased self-reliance will enable him to make his own choice of professions, rather than take the word of some one else as to what he wants, or is fitted, to do.

• • • •

Four years or more in college give ample time for surveying the field of occupational opportunity and arriving at a practical decision. For a boy who is willing to work for his college education, as "One-Of-Many" is willing, the four years will be well spent. When he has arrived at manhood, he will know pretty much where he wants to go and how to get there. Sincerely yours,

SOCRATES.

A Convincing Argument.

DEAR SOCRATES: Thank you for giving "One-of-Many" the benefit of your convincing argument in defense of the value of college education. Let's summarize the points you've made, in the order of their importance, as I see them:

1. Socialization of the individual, i. e., teaching him by experience how to live in harmonious social democracy with his fellows.

• • • •

2. Pushing back the frontiers of his mental horizon, so that he has a birdseye view rather than a porthole glimpse, of occupational opportunities as they exist today for the young man of imagination and initiative.

3. The achievement of a proper perspective on life, so that he can take his place in the contemporary foreground with a minimum risk of becoming a round peg in a square hole; or, to mix metaphors, so that he will avoid mistaking a blind alley for the open road leading to his particular goal.

• • • •

4. Development of that self-reliance which engenders wisdom, courage and resourcefulness in making one's own important decisions and in intelligently orienting oneself to circumstances, good or bad.

5. Gives time for working out a practical relationship between the subjective world of self and the objective world of reality, so that a way is discovered for harnessing one's dreams, talents and ambitions into a continuous, materially productive and psychologically satisfactory social usefulness.

• • • •

It seems doubtful if any other of "One-of-Many's" contemporaries can supply a better answer to his question: "Will you advise me how I may best make my college career contribute to success in life?"

Surely any who are inclined to discount the value of a college education will find your argument difficult to disprove. It will be interesting to see if any are willing to attempt it.

Economist Gives Rules For Intelligent Buying

MISS DAY MONROE,
acting head of the Bureau of Home Economics, gives a few pointers on how the modern housewife can be a better buyer.

"Central Wardrobe" and "Check List" Cut Cost of Clothes, Miss Day Monroe Explains; Food Shoppers Urged to Watch for Sales.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

EVERY WOMAN wants to learn how to pull her purse strings tighter and to loosen them only when she is sure of getting her money's worth.

Just how to do this was explained yesterday by Miss Day Monroe, senior economist and acting head of the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, who gave some pointers on how women could "be better buyers."

Formerly a member of the faculty at Teachers College, Columbia University, later a teacher at the University of Chicago, and more recently at Cornell, Miss Monroe has given much time and study to the consumer's angle of the market. Her work along this line has convinced her that if each woman educated herself to shop intelligently, she would make her money go further and would be better satisfied with what she bought.

Take clothes, for example. How many women plan a "central wardrobe" and refrain from buying anything that doesn't fit in? How many women make a "check list" when they go to buy a dress? Not many, according to Miss Monroe; yet she believes both of these are essential to saving money and getting service from one's purchases.

Definite Plan Cuts Cost.

"So many women go shopping without any definite idea as to what they want," she said. "The result is when they see a chic hat or an attractive blouse, they are tempted to buy without thinking whether they have anything else to wear with it. Any shopper can cut down the cost of her wardrobe by making a definite plan about how many hats she will need, how many dresses, and what accessories."

Then about the check list Miss Monroe heartily recommends. She believes a woman buying a wash dress, for example, should have a written list of points to consider before she makes the purchase. She should find out if the dress is preshrunk; she should look for a label guaranteeing that the dye is fast; she should examine the stitching to see if it is straight and notice the buttons to see if they are neatly covered. "And by all means," Miss Monroe said, "she should try to sit down in the dress before she decides on it."

Discussing food budgets, Miss Monroe told how the average housekeeper could reduce her monthly grocery bill at least 12 per cent—at least so far as "staples" (sugar, flour, butter and coffee) are concerned. A surprising amount of money could be saved, she said, if every woman took advantage of food sales conducted frequently at grocery and department stores.

"But here again a plan of buying is necessary," she explained. "A woman who makes a habit of purchasing a can of peas or a bottle of catsup just because it happens to be cheap and without any thought whether her grocery shelf needs it, won't find her grocery bill decreasing very much."

Shopping Around Advised.

Having done much research on the food market set-up, Miss Monroe has learned from experience that a housekeeper can profit by reading advertisements; that a woman who makes a list from products listed in the newspapers and on handbills can reduce her grocery bill materially; and that it pays to "shop around" from one store to another because "there is a noticeable difference between prices in stores—even the ones located in the same district."

She mentioned, however, that the intelligent buyer takes other points besides the price in deciding to trade at a food store. "Cleanliness and service are both important," she said. "Where sanitation and service are of the best quality, prices are sometimes higher. But both of these must be taken into consideration in bargain buying."

In regard to purchasing housefurnishings, Miss Monroe explained that a woman had to know her mind as well as the merchandise in order to get the most for her money. "A plan is essential," she said, "for 'hit-and-miss buying' in this can both drain the pocketbook and ruin the appearance of one's home. Furniture, draperies and rugs should harmonize. They should be selected with an eye to the needs of the rooms as well as the personal taste of the buyer. Durability, too, must be taken into consideration and economy must be considered from a long-range point of view. For instance, a woman must realize that a cheap chair that will last only a month or two without repairs is no bargain and will entail more expense eventually than a chair priced twice as high."

HOW to KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE is scarcely a symptom caused by actual (organic) disease that can not be imitated by the antics of the nervous system. Disturbances of function, pain, nausea, vomiting, and that out-of-sorts feeling may all be traced to nervousness or, as it is more properly termed, a "neurosis."

Such manifestations are observed most commonly in the digestive tract and there are thousands of cases of unnecessary invalidism and some instances of useless abdominal operations because the symptoms presented are not carefully evaluated. We have so many means of making an accurate diagnosis that there appears to be no excuse for failure to give proper consideration to symptoms that are basically of nervous origin. The careful physician depends fully as much upon a logical analysis of symptoms as he does upon the results of laboratory examinations.

Let us suppose that we have a severe infection of the intestinal tract that causes a dysentery or a diarrhea which continues for several days. If sufficient rest is not secured at the time, and if the inflammation is not allowed to recede in a normal manner, we may have as a sequel what is termed an irritable colon. This state of the colon may be relayed to the nervous system, which, in turn, by constantly sending impulses to the part, may excite contractions which delay healing and interfere with normal function.

Infection of the bladder wall that has been completely healed may be followed by nervous contractions of the structure and hence frequency of urination. In the same way inflammation of the eye is sometimes followed by annoying spasms of the muscles shown in convulsive winking, etc. In certain cases it is well known that asthma may follow a long continued irritation of the bronchi.

We must recall that physical factors that are disregarded at the time because they are so insignificant may be finally of sufficient force to precipitate a chain of nervous manifestations. Fatigue as a result of chronic anxiety is a common example. An individual with a high strung nervous system will need but a breath of air, as it were, to start him along a pathway of complaints that seem never ending. A much more powerful stimulus in one with greater nervous stability is without effect. Every physician has many patients who have actually established a train of symptoms because some minor physical ailment was not understood or fully explained. For example, the fear of cancer may make life unbearable not only to the possessor of the fear but to all members of the family.

"A lump in the stomach," is a fairly common neurosis. Instead of telling the patient that it is all imagination, the wise physician will state truthfully that the symptom is probably due to stomach contractions more powerful than normal, originating in the nervous system.

$210,000,000,000 In Investments Held by Women

The American woman is a great capitalist, according to Miss Catherine Curtis, national director of Women Investors, Inc.

"Women of this country," she said, "hold $210,000,000,000 in investments and have 80 per cent of all life insurance policies, 65 per cent of all bank accounts, and 44 per cent of all public utility securities."

The organization which Miss Curtis heads was recently chartered in New York State. Its purpose is to organize women for protection of their investments and to "oppose economically unsound legislation."

Miss Curtis said her group would organize in every State and eventually would have a representative in Washington.

250 Words a Minute Proper for Reading

A person reading at the proper speed will get through 125 words in half a minute, C. Gilbert Wren, assistant registrar at Stanford University believes, according to the Associated Press. If it takes you longer than the allotted time you probably have word fixation, Mr. Wren says. For example he gives the sentence "The little girl went into the house with her mother," which contains the fixation words "little girl," "house" and "mother." Any word upon which the reader concentrates briefly is a fixation word, according to the assistant registrar.

Visors on Evening Hats Recall Tennis Courts

Paris (AP).—Evening hats borrowed from the tennis court are something different in summer styles. Flower-covered visors, made like an exaggerated tennis visor, held in place by a band around the back of the head, are designed by one prominent modiste for restaurant dinner wear. Another evening visor is made of black velvet with two black birds of paradise sweeping backward from the sides.

Recipe Is Suggested for Housewives Who Must Prepare Quick Meal.

By Dorothea Duncan.

"SAWF crabs, sawf crabs," falls like music on our ears. Let's have some for dinner tonight and prepare them in the good old Maryland manner. For a family of four, take 12 small soft shell crabs, one-half pound of butter, black pepper, salt and flour. See that the crabs are cleaned thoroughly, wash and wipe dry, salt and season highly with black pepper, then dust with flour. Have butter at the bubbling point, put crabs in pan, and turn frequently, until nicely browned. Serve at once, garnished with parsley and tartar sauce.

The hard shell crab, too, comes in for its inning as a perfect hot weather dish. When you are out to impress the best connoisseur and you haven't much time for kitchen work, plan to serve crab meat Dewey.

Crab Meat Dewey.

Melt two ounces of butter and blend with two ounces of sifted flour, gradually add 2-3 cup of chicken stock (canned chicken bouillon will serve for this purpose) and a pint of thin cream.

Bring to a boil and cook gently for about five minutes, season with salt and cayenne pepper. Stir in the yolks of three well-beaten eggs.

Be sure that the sauce is perfectly smooth, a wire wisk will help you out here. Add one cup of thin sliced cooked mushrooms and one pound of crab meat. Serve on toast in a shallow casserole. Garnish with a sprinkling of very finely chopped parsley.

For a dish to supplant cream chicken gravy, try crab meat a la creole to complement timbales of dry, boiled rice.

Crab Meat a la Creole.

One pound of crab meat, one large green pepper, one medium onion, one thin slice ham. Cut ham in strips about 2 inches long and 1-16-inch wide; cook slowly about 10 minutes in butter till onions and peppers are done, then add about one pound of tomatoes (skinned and seeds removed) chopped fine, and one-quarter pound mushrooms sliced thin, one clove of crushed garlic, dampen with three ounces of white wine, one-half pint of stock (ham if handy). Reduce mixture over slow fire for 10 minutes, season with salt, paprika and few grains of cayenne pepper and mix all together. Serve with timbales of dry, boiled rice.

No talk of the merits of the crab is complete without mention of everyone's favorite dish:

Deviled Crabs.

One pound crab meat, 12 clean crab shells, one-half teaspoon black pepper, one-fourth teaspoon red pepper, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter, one cup milk, one tablespoon flour. Put into a saucepan one tablespoon butter and melt. Add to it, stirring smoothly, one tablespoon flour and one cup of milk. Cook until it thickens. Add crab meat and seasonings and blend together. Fill crab shells, dip the tops of the filled shells in beaten egg, then cracker meal, and brown in hot oven.

Mrs. Laura Kirk, 29, Chesapeake City, abrasions.

Miss Daisy Paris, 20, slight lacerations. Treated and left hospital.

Officials of the company were not able to estimate the loss immediately. Though the two buildings destroyed were small metal structures, it was said they contained much valuable machinery.

"Salute" Building Blown Up.

There are more than 40 such buildings operated by the company. It was said the buildings are scattered as much as possible to avoid danger to others if one is involved in a fire.

The explosion occurred in the "salute" building, where fireworks, resembling small bombs, were manufactured. A machine making fuses for the bombs exploded.

It was not possible to determine immediately the cause of the explosion. Robert Harmon, who was operating the machine which exploded, said he was blown through an open door. He was injured only slightly.

The second building was destroyed by fire which followed the blast.

Treasure Hunters Again Seek Old Ship Sunk Off Delaware

Wrecked Vessel Thought to Hold Fortune in Spanish Coin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewes, Del., June 4.—Seekers of lost treasures of the deep sea have again turned their attention to the salvaging of the sunken sloop of war, De Braak, and its reputed cargo of gold and silver bullion locked in the hold of the vessel when it overturned in the Delaware breakwaters, off Lewes, in 1798.

Undaunted by past failures of other salvaging parties, a group of New England treasure hunters has arrived in Lewes equipped with magnet finders and diving equipment, and chartered two motor launches which are daily sweeping the waters with cable lines in the vicinity of the outer breakwater.

The small British sloop, 125 feet long with a 30-foot beam and a depth of about 12 feet, which belonged to the British navy when it sank, was originally a Dutch ship. Seeking anchorage off Cape Henlopen under mainsail and reefed topsail, the heavily-laden craft was struck by a squall and overturned, with the loss of Capt. James Drew, Capt. Gilbert McCracken, pilot, and 38 officers, seamen, and the loot from two captured Spanish ships. About 25 of the crew escaped. Three Spanish prisoners floated to shore on Capt. Drew's trunk, using it as a raft. This trunk, the property of Randolph McCracken, great grandson of the pilot, is now on display in the Zwaanendael Museum, at Lewes. Capt. Drew was buried in old St. Peter's churchyard, here. Attempts to salvage the De Braak have been made periodically since 1805.

In the summers of 1932 and 1933 the late Ralph E. Chapman, of the New York salvaging firm of Merritt, Chapman and Scott, dragged the Delaware breakwaters for several months with more success than any other seekers, as the claim was made that pieces of teakwood, of which the sloop was constructed, were recovered and identified as part of the vessel. With Chapman's death the search was abandoned. The Chapman group was aided by an ancient chart showing the soundings of the bay in 1798, purchased from the British Admiralty office. The periodic searches have been made difficult because no man knows the exact location, but it is believed that the doubloons of the treasure ship are buried 80 feet in the mud and sand due to the constant changing of the shore line in the last 137 years.

State Charges Slaying Intent In Span Attack

Indictment of D. C. Man Will Be Sought, Says County Attorney.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 4.—State's Attorney James C. L. Anderson, of Baltimore County, said he would seek the indictment of William Clarks, Washington, on a charge of having assaulted Mrs. Mary Branch, 31, of Washington, with intent to murder her.

Mrs. Branch is alleged to have been attacked and thrown from a bridge over the Patapsco River at Ilchester on May 20. She was questioned today by Anderson.

Clark has been held in the Baltimore County Jail at Towson since his arrest in Washington two days after the alleged attack.

Mrs. Branch, who has been confined to her home, was brought to Towson today by Washington and Baltimore City detectives. She said she still is suffering from injuries sustained when she was thrown from the bridge.

Anderson said Mrs. Branch told him she was riding with Clark when he stopped the car, beat her and threw her over the bridge railing.

Housewife Loses Mayor Race As Incumbent Removes Coat

By the Associated Press.

Glenville, W. Va., June 4.—Mandy lost the election by 17 votes.

Full returns tonight showed that Mrs. Amanda Thompson, capable housewife and candidate for Mayor of Glenville on the "Reshuffle" ticket, failed to unseat Mayor A. L. Cottrill. He was reelected on the "reform" ticket, 68 votes to 51.

Neighborhood women, who had waged a militant "Mandy for Mayor" campaign, tonight abandoned celebration plans which called for a "sun bonnet parade and mayoe a square dance."

Mandy could not be immediately reached for comment, nor could her husband, Roy, who himself had been a mayoralty candidate. He withdrew in favor of Mandy on the eve of the election with the curt announcement:

"One candidate in the family is enough."

But this action only came after a number of family caucuses, in one of which his daughter, Virginia, advised:

"You'd better let mamma run; she'll win."

Mayor Cottrill, who had taken no part in the campaign, was fired to action today by the activities of the housewives who postponed a scheduled "sun bonnet" parade so as to "get out the vote for Mandy."

The mayor stripped off his coat and, walking the streets of the village of 700 persons, appealed for support. He is a middle-aged stock farmer.

Virginia Tax To Fall Short Of Schedule

Cuts in Power Rates Held to Blame for Deficiency.

Governor's 1934 Levy Will Be $111,000 Less Than Expected.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 4.—The Governor's 1934 tax bill, passed by the last General Assembly to give the State $621,000 additional revenue annually, will fall by $111,000 to yield the expected sum, a fiscal report of the State corporation commission showed today.

Chairman Thomas W. Ozlin pointed out that substantial cuts in power company rates during the past year reduced the 1934-35 gross receipts from gas and electricity, on which taxes are to be paid in October.

State revenues from railroads operating in Virginia will fall below estimates, the report said, because of the railroads' failure to maintain the increased volume of business they were doing when the original estimates were made.

Instead of the estimated $3,303,500, the railroads will pay only $2,547,100 in taxes, Ozlin said.

The failure of power company and railroad tax revenue to come up to expectations will cause the Commission's tax total to be $3,735,797 for 1935-36 instead of the $4,586,300 estimated in the budget.

It was this shortage of $850,000 which was largely responsible for Gov. Peery's recent action in ordering a continuation of the 5 per cent cut applied to the general appropriations of all State departments.

Although the revenue from public service corporations will fall $850,000 shy of budget estimates, it will exceed by approximately $85,000 the $3,650,044 collected during the past year.

Railroads, electric railways, telephone and telegraph companies, power companies, express companies, steamboats, car lines and pullmans will pay slightly higher taxes this fall.

George A. Bowles, State commissioner of insurance, also estimated insurance license taxes will bring in about $100,000 more in 1935-36, based on gross receipts they earn during 1935, than in 1934-35.

Nice Shelves Survey Board Appointment

Says Two Members of Commission May Be Sufficient.

Data Being Assembled for Hearings to Be Held Soon.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 4.—Gov. Harry W. Nice said today he may not appoint a chairman for the State survey commission in place of Amos W. W. Woodcock if the two remaining members of the commission believe they can conduct the survey without a third appointment.

Isaac Lobe Straus and J. Cookman Boyd, prominent members of the Baltimore Bar, now form the survey board.

"I want to confer with the two present members as soon as possible and will go thoroughly into the matter before making a decision," Gov. Nice asserted. "If a new chairman is to be appointed I want to consider carefully before I name him."

Gov. Nice said he has authorized the board to name a secretary, select office personnel and begin at once to assemble data for hearings which will begin soon.

He is to leave for Biloxi, Miss., on June 11 for the conference of governors. A heavy press of duties prior to that time makes the date of the meeting with Boyd and Straus indefinite. It may not occur until he returns, he said.

Upon his return from the Southern city, the Governor said he probably will name appointees to all State offices not now filled. This includes two members of the State conservation department, which for the time being will remain a one-man department under Robert F. Duer, chairman.

Duer was closeted with the Governor for a lengthy conference today. Whether prospective associates for the conservation commission were discussed was not stated.

Mechanic Held, Husband Freed In Wife's Death

Jury Told 'Friend' Carried Woman on Shoulder 'Like a Sack.'

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., June 4.—George W. Clark, a mechanic, today was ordered held for the Corporation Court grand jury on the charge that he murdered Mrs. Frances Stanley Sutton, a young expectant mother.

At the same time Police Justice J. Harry May freed Luther H. Sutton, the woman's husband, saying there was not sufficient evidence to warrant holding him. When the decision was announced Clark sobbed on the shoulder of his attorney.

Five hours' testimony failed to reveal the cause of Mrs. Sutton's death and neither the prosecution nor the defense asked Coroner T. M. Parkins to reveal the result of an anlysis of the woman's stomach contents.

Witnesses said they saw Clark carry the woman over his shoulders, "like a sack of meal," from the apartment building where he had engaged a room through a nearby alley and "dump" her into an automobile. None was certain whether she was alive at the time.

Another witness said his curiosity was aroused by the manner in which Clark drove the automobile. He said he followed Clark in a circuitous route through the western and sparsely settled section of the city, where he finally lost the trail.

The coroner testified Clark told him "Mrs. Sutton had been after me for a month to perform an abortion but I consistently refused."

Parkins said Clark told him he rented the room and left the woman in it. When he returned, Parkins quoted Clark as saying Mrs. Sutton was only semi-conscious.

MERA Erecting 6 New Schools, Repairing 672

Work Under Program for Maryland Is Reported Well Under Way.

By the Associated Press.

Francis H. Dryden, State engineer for the works relief body, said today that four of the new schools are under construction and repairs are being made on 330. Two of the new structures and repairs to 342 have been completed.

In addition to work on the school buildings, improved sanitary facilities have been supplied 459 of them. Playgrounds also have been constructed. In all of this work the MERA has furnished the labor, with materials supplied locally.

The work done is indicated by the fact that 1,525,304 square feet of painting, 28,620 square feet of roofing, 31,087 square feet of masonry and 41,400 feet of plastering patching were done in the school program between May 1, 1934, and April 27, this year, Dryden said.

Virginia Set To Maintain Liquor Code

A.B.C. to Act if NRA Decision Dooms U.S. Standards.

Board Empowered to Effect Any Part of Federal Rules.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 4.—If, as President Roosevelt has predicted, some of the Federal Alcoholic Beverage Control Administration's regulations of the liquor industry are nullified because of the NRA decision of the United States Supreme Court, the Virginia ABC Board intends to be prepared to plug any gaps which may develop.

The Virginia board has the power to promulgate any sections of the Federal Liquor code it chooses under the State control act.

Board Watches Labeling.

A. B. Clarke, public relations counsel for the board, today said that regulations governing standards of identity and labeling were the particular concern of the Virginia board.

He said Stanley Clarke, assistant attorney general attached to the board, was making a special study of the Federal rules in relation to the NRA decision.

Some of the regulations regarding tax payment and licensing are under the Federal Internal Revenue Bureau and can not be affected by the NRA decision.

Define Various Whiskies.

The identity and labeling regulations to which Mr. Clarke referred define the several terms, such as "straight whisky," a "blend," "Bourbon," etc., under which all legal liquor has been marketed in Virginia during the past year. The rules also require that the strength or "proof" and the age be shown on the bottle and that the manufacturer be identified by location, name and license number.

Many of the Federal interstate regulations already are paralleled by provisions of the State law.

Easton Talks on Effect Of the NRA Decision

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 4.—John B. Easton, president of the West Virginia Federation of Labor, addressed a public meeting here last night on developments which, he said, might reasonably be expected to follow the Supreme Court NRA decision. He pleaded with labor "to keep its feet on the ground" and "it's head up," and that it "lose none of the valuable things it has attained, until a program is in force which will "replace the NRA codes and program." Among the benefits, he said, is the outlawing of child labor.

While here he also was undertaking to hold a series of conferences looking toward settlement of a strike at two local limestone quarries which has been in progress for seven weeks.

Warner Brothers "Anchors Aweigh" Unit Set Filming Record at Naval Academy

Borzage's Men Set New Mark First Day Out

Do 4,000 Feet in 2 Hours; Bergner on Wednesday; About Showshops.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is Sam Clark, of the Warner Brothers production units working at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, who informs me that a record was made there last Saturday. This record consisted of "shooting" 4,000 feet of motion-picture film in two hours, when the first sequence of "Anchors Aweigh" was photographed with Dick Powell and 1,500 officers and men participating in the pictured action.

Only because the men were trained to perfection was it possible to obtain so great a footage of "lock-her-up" film in so short a "shooting" schedule—"lock-her-up" film being celluloid that the director has entirely approved for developing.

The presentation of colors and awards were the two important scenes filmed on Saturday.

Due to the absence of Ruby Keeler, who will arrive at Annapolis in a few days, accompanied by Lewis S. Stone, Rose Alexander and Eddie Acuff, with numerous other players to be recruited from New York, Baltimore and Washington; Hilda Hazard, of Baltimore played in the scenes with Dick Powell. She is the lucky Baltimore beauty who was chosen as the "color girl" for the June week festivities at the Academy.

Took Week Last Year.

Last year, so Mr. Clark tells me, while this same group of cameramen and technical experts filmed similar sequences for "Flirtation Walk," which has since been seen around the world, it took a full week to get the same results that were accomplished in Annapolis on Saturday.

Sixty men are included in the unit now on location in Annapolis and four freight cars were necessary to transport their electrical and prop material for the making of the picture.

Four weeks are planned for this location "shooting," and longer will be spent if bad breaks in the weather make it necessary. Most of the scenes to be done in the East are out of doors.

Writers to Watch.

The drama desks of the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington papers have been invited to visit the scene of the filming and spend a day seeing how pictures actually are made—something we got a glimpse of when Walter Huston made "Rodney," released under the title of "Keep 'Em Rolling," out at Fort Myer.

Because of Dick Powell's regular Friday night broadcasts on the "Hollywood Hotel" hour, he will come to Washington each Friday, whence his broadcast will be picked up by the New York station.

Carvel Hall has been selected as the official working headquarters of the "Anchors Aweigh" company in Annapolis.

"Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's, running true to form, advises this desk that Elisabeth Bergner will inaugurate her run on Fifteenth street in the film version of her stage success, "Escape Me Never," Wednesday evening of this week at 7:45 o'clock. From all report—and a great deal has been written about it in the cities where it has been shown, especially New York, where both the stage play and the picture have been on view—the screen version of "Escape Me Never" is infinitely superior to the stage version. Remembering the extraordinary impression Miss Bergner created when she appeared on the same screen in "Catherine the Great"—the only vehicle in which the Capital ever has seen here—her second picture to reach this city should be awaited with unusual eagerness.

And, of course, Wednesday night is the worst possible night, from the point of view of this column, upon which "Escape Me Never" could have been opened here.

The title of Dorothea Lewis' new play, "Where Masks Are Worn," comes from no less authoritative a source than the late Mr. Noah Webster's unabridged dictionary, which defines "masquerade" in those words.

The Columbia Players, who are producing the play for the first time on any stage in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, northwest, on Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week, June 5 and 6, also make known that the first "line" of the play is a sigh and the last a laugh. However, Miss Lewis, who is superstitious, will not allow anyone to laugh until opening night. She also slips the titles of some of her other plays into the lines for good luck.

Repeaters in Cast.

There are 19 characters in the play—"I should learn, but I don't seem to," Dot observes in this connection—exactly the same number included in "Second Act Curtain," by the same author, which the Columbia Players did with eminent success about a year ago. Six people who played in that production also appear in the current one. They are Robert M. Miller, Wayne Bobst, B. A. P. Doehrer, Joe Bourne, Richard Kreuzburg and Helen Mead.

Copies of the song, "The White Angora Rabbit," composed especially for this production by Adolf Torovsky, will be on sale in the lobby.

An Ambulant Author.

Miss Lewis confides further that "Where Masks Are Worn" was written in Nags Head, N. C., New York City, Atlantic City, in bed at 2216 Thirteenth street, the Lewis ancestral home; at radio hearings and the sad, sad lyrics for "The White Angora Rabbit" at a boot and shoe hearing at poor, dear, old NRA.

The longest rehearsal of the play to date has lasted only from 3 in the afternoon until midnight! It will be the last of the Columbia Players' season.

When the Johnny J. Jones Exposition, controlled and operated by E. Lawrence Phillips, well-known Washington showman and former announcer at Mr. Griffith's ballyard, rolled into Washington yesterday morning to fulfill its engagement as the official midway attraction of the National Shrine Convention, it found its show grounds occupied by the Jehovah Witnesses, in convention here, as a parking lot. The show, nevertheless, will open on Wednesday, tomorrow, and remain in town through the Shriners' conclave. A new attraction since its last recent appearance here is Freezo, "the human polar bear." Freezo, whose real name is Elton A. Rogers, dons a bathing suit and permits himself to be packed and sealed in 1,000 pounds of ice, where he remains for an uninterrupted period of 30 minutes. Doing this once might be O. K. for any hardy individual, but undergoing the violent change in temperature three or four times a day occasions some wear and tear on even the sturdiest constitution—which is the kind "Freezo" Rogers must have.

New Treatment for Bard.

The Children's Theater will present Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" in their own words at the Brightwood School auditorium Thursday evening of this week at 8 o'clock.

A careful study of the characters and plot enables the children to offer portrayals that are said to be of unusual sincerity. The play is being produced under the direction of Miss Helen Burton. The Brightwood School is located at Thirteenth and Nicholson streets northwest.

Miss Burton informs me that the actors in her play are 10, 11 and 12 years of age and build the play themselves. There are no set lines to learn, no bits of action of stage "business" to imitate, but there is a play that grows out of the children's own minds, imaginations and emotions. This is possible because of a thorough study of the plot and minute analysis of each character, permitting each child to become familiar with all the characters and enabling him to interchange roles with his associates without difficulty.

Will Play Arts Club.

On Thursday evening, June 18, the Children's Theater will appear in the Garden Theater of the Arts Club of Washington at 8:30 o'clock and demonstrate the manner in which they build a play, following a talk by Miss Burton on the subject of "Creative Dramatics."

Miss Burton, incidentally, is applying methods in Washington, which she acquired at Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., in a course of study under Miss Winifred Ward, professor of speech, originator of the idea.

It is, to say the least, an interesting experiment that should be of great help to adolescents in the development of their creative faculties.

The Roadside Theater is preceding the opening of its summer season in its new "red barn" theater, out the Rockville pike, with a dinner on the stage of their playhouse Sunday night, June 9, at 7 o'clock. The drama desks are graciously bidden to the festivities by Catherine Prichard, secretary of the organization. If past performances may be relied upon, a majority of them will be there, enthusiastically, hungrily and gratefully.

Civic Theater's First.

The National Civic Theater Society, newly organized Washington producing group, has placed its first play in rehearsal, preparatory to the inauguration of its first season on June 11, at 8:45 p. m., in one of the most beautiful theaters in this vicinity—The Odeon, a tree bordered playhouse on the campus of the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md.

The play selected to introduce this new acting group to Washington's summer theatergoers is "Stepping Sisters," a three-act farce, which enjoyed a Broadway run a few seasons ago.

The players cast for this initial venture include Robert Pitkin, well-known professional, remembered as the Ko-Ko to Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink's Katisha in the Shubert's revival of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" a few years ago, and as a member of Myrtis Morgan's Belasco Theater Art Society cast at the Belasco last season; Margaret Hatfield, David Appleby, Helen Shields, Catherine McCord, Richard Midgely, Ann Garrett, Theodore Tiller 2d, Peter Koff, Beth Thompson and Catherine Durkin.

Reese Will Direct.

The company will be stage-directed by Forney Reese, remembered for his villain in the Willard Roof production of "The Drunkard" last summer, and actor-playwright-producer-puppeteer, Ted Tiller, will double as stage manager.

On opening night, which falls on Tuesday—a week from tomorrow—the mezzanine and orchestra boxes will be decorated to designate the State officials occupying them.

The price scale will be orchestra, 83 cents; mezzanine, 55 cents; boxes, $1.10.

The National Civic Theater Society, the formation of which was first announced in this column, was organized by Miss Myrtis Morgan, who, with Lee K. Holland, well-known Capital showman, will be co-director in this serious attempt to establish a national civic theater—a project much discussed by many interests, but never locally consummated.

At yesterday's "birthday luncheon" of the Variety Club in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel, a considerable number of birthday gifts were distributed, not to the club, which is one year old this month, not to those who actually have birthdays during the current week, but to the recipients of lucky votes. The gifts, which ran up to an impressive total value, were contributed by Goldie Ahearn, local sportsman and haberdasher, who donated a credit certificate good in merchandise at his Men's Shop; Fred Pelzman, who did the same; the Guarantee Liquor Stores, Inc., right across Fourteenth street from the goings-on, where the best is a little cheaper; Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater; Bill Fisher, formerly of the Columbia Theater, and the sports department of The Washington Post.

Joan Marsh, headlining at Loew's Fox, and the Landt Trio and White, dittoing at the Earle, furnished the entertainment, Lewis and Ames, Fox, having canceled at the last minute, and Paul Draper, Earle, having conveniently forgotten his dancing shoes so that he wouldn't have to do "an extra show." Miss Marsh was guest of honor and cut the gorgeous birthday cake, bearing one candle, provided in compliment to Variety by Harry P. Somerville, managing director of the Willard.

Nautical Note.

With all of these Navy pictures being made down at Annapolis, with extras being recruited from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, it seems to us that we ought to be able to get some kind of job with one or the other of the units on location at the Naval Academy.

Maybe a Bell buoy, or something!

I probably could qualify, except for "U!"

Also Making a Film at Annapolis

These smiling young people, of course, are Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler, reading in the usual direction, co-stars of the Warner Brothers' production of "Anchors Aweigh," now "in work" at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. As was remarked on this page yesterday, Dick already is on the ground, having been a Sunday visitor in Washington, and Ruby is on her way East with Lewis S. Stone and other members of the cast. This picture will treat of the Naval Academy as "Flirtation Walk" did of life at West Point.

Interest was added to Ethel Barrymore's second appearance of the "little season" on E street, as guest star of the National Theater Players, last night by the fact that her welcome reappearance was signalized by a revival of an earlier play written by Zoe Akins, winner of the 1934-35 season's Pulitzer Prize.

Miss Akins' "The Old Maid," in which Helen Menken and Judith Anderson have the leading roles on Broadway, has never been closer to Washington than Baltimore, where it was given its premiere, but the dramatic fiber of "Declassee," the vehicle of Miss Barrymore's current engagement, is enough in itself to place its author among the more deft and discerning playwrights.

"Declassee" reveals the tragic decline of a spirited woman of aristocratic birth and marriage, whose house of cards came tumbling down about her head as the result of a single mistake in the choice of friends who might with impunity be invited into her home. Two of them proved to be card sharps, willing to cheat for money in friendly drawing room games, and from this discovery sprang the incidents that were deemed sufficient to justify a divorce in the slightly bleary eyes of Sir Bruce Haden, knighted for his eminence as the British Empire's foremost butcher, and on the occasion of the fatal evening dull-witted from having plied himself too copiously with liquor.

Falls on Evil Days.

From that time forth, th life of Lady Helen Haden pursued a constantly descending financial, social and spiritual course. Exiling herself in New York, she manages to maintain some vestige of her former opulence by gradually disposing of her fortune in jewels until the last pearl is made the medium of payment of a modest check in the dining room of a smart hotel.

Then there enters the picture one Rudolph Solomon, former New York newsboy, who has won his way to riches, a magnificent town house and the standing of a connoisseur and collector of rare paintings, jewels and objets d'art, who seeks the hand of Lady Helen as a fitting chatelaine for his elaborate establishment. He is accepted and all seems well until by one of those odd quirks of a perverse fate all of the figures concerned in the scandal in Sir Bruce Haden's home two years before assemble in the Solomon mansion and the sordid details of an unpleasant contretemps again are dragged into the light.

A Tragic Climax.

It is here that the play's tragic climax and denouement are introduced and a drama that is neither so talky nor so long as Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," Miss Barrymore's first play with the National group, comes to a convenient, if not a happy, ending.

The visiting star, in the role of Lady Helen Haden, revives more than Miss Akins' play. She revives also a great deal of the variety of mood and expression, the pathos and the charm of a portrayal that was recognized as one of her most engaging during the three years she played "Declassee" in New York and in the principal cities of the country. It is possible that some of her lines may not have been audible throughout the far reaches of the house, but to those down front her performance was delightful, and if it was not to those farther back then that fact was belied by the enthusiasm that greeted Miss Barrymore and her supporting cast at the fall of the final curtain.

The company has been considerably augmented to meet the requirements of a play enlisting a longer cast than usual for stock purposes. Walter Gilbert is seen as the unsuccessful lover, Harry Charteris, and plays the part gracefully, although in the first act he seemed not too sure of his lines. Warren Parker does a handsome piece of work in the best role he has had to date as the young card cheat who goes straight in South Africa and makes good too late. The pivotal role of Solomon is played a little out of his customary mood and tempo by J. Arthur Young and Edwina Wise appears as the musical comedy star whom Solomon abandons for Lady Helen and then restores to her former place in his favor. Miss Wise is a promising ingenue.

Others Who Score.

Ruth Lee gives another of her letter-perfect performances as Mrs. Leslie an obnoxious young woman who has many cordial enemies, and Adelaide Hibbard does her accustomed grand job as Lady Wildering, wife of the British Ambassaor, played by Manart Kippen, a newcomer. Sir Bruce Haden is impersonated effectively by Herbert Standing, an actor not unknown to Washington audiences. Edith Speare is cast as a New York stage favorite and Alfred Hessee as Jean, head waiter.

The company is augmented from the ranks of local players by the reliable Maud Howell Smith, John Sikken, George Calvert, Jean Prince and Richard Stringfellow.

Charles Squires' settings and Karl Nielsen's direction and appearance in a small part contribute finishing touches to another production that stamps this as the best season the National Players have offered in years.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, June 4.

THE Irish stock company at Warners—Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh—are playing together in a Shamrock domestic comedy titled: "The Irish in Us!" These three performers, it is needless to comment, do not have to apply make-up to resemble Irishmen.

Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh are brothers in this flicker, and it was necessary to find an actress Irish enough to appear as if she really could be the mother of these three. Such fine character actreses as Emma Dunn and Helen Lowell were being considered, when to the casting office came a photograph with a letter attached stating: "I know you are looking for an Irish character woman. My face speaks for itself and I need the job." The letter was signed, Mary Gordon. To be brief about it: She was tested, given the role, and Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh go about singing her praise. They grab any stray newspaperman wandering about the studio, and he soon finds himself standing among them on the set, watching their Mary Gordon.

* * * *

Mary Gordon has been in flickers for years. She started at the old Robertson-Colt studio, where she worked as a cook for $5 a week, lunch free. She has been doing extra work since the day when Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh first walked up a flight of stairs to a Broadway theatrical producer's office looking for fame. Now she has a full-sized role with several big dramatic sequences, and she stands a chance of clicking. She is as excited as Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh when they walked up that Broadway flight of stairs. "Get the way she's playing that Irish lady," says O'Brien. "She's more Irish than any of us. You'd never believe she's really Scotch."

* * * *

THERE is plenty of fun on this set. Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh play around together, and they don't stop playing merely because they happen to be working together. Lloyd Bacon is directing the flicker, and he joins in, trying to be one of the good fellows. There are no fights, temperament, or scene stealing on this set. They are all friends; at least, they were at the time of this writing.

Anything for a laugh and to make the work fun. They had a plaster model of Lloyd Bacon's hand made. The fingers of Bacon's hand are all clenched except the index finger, and that one is pointed upward.

The troupe plays a scene, and if any member fumbles a line, spoiling the scene, the property man rushes onto the set and gives him the plaster model of Bacon's hand. This is what is known as getting the finger. The actor who makes the most fumbles wins possession of the trophy for the day. This day, McHugh won, hands up. No hits, no runs, but what errors!

* * * *

You never completely realize, watching a dance number on the screen, how long it took to film that routine. I spent practically an entire afternoon looking at Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dance to Irving Berlin's "Piccolino." Since it was Astaire it wasn't hard to take. Fred and Ginger and a chorus of boys and girls danced on a brightly polished floor. After each take, a squad of men with mops would go into action, making the floor seem as if no foot had walked on it. Thus, you will not be able to tell when you see "Top Hat" that when the chorus rushes on to do the dance it is really the fifteenth or sixteenth time they have done it. Four cameras were grinding away from different positions to catch the dance from various angles. There's more to a dance number in pictures than just dancing.

* * * *

KATHARINE HEPBURN is now making "Alice Adams," and a young director, George Stevens, is directing her. Miss Hepburn and Stevens confer before each sequence; they have an informal rehearsal. "Look," says Hepburn, "I believe it will be better if I say that line sitting on the step instead of standing up, eh?" She does it. Stevens says, "Yeah, it's better." Director and actress seem to be doing fine, thank you.

It is a free and easy scene, and therefore Hepburn is free and easy. While waiting to do a sequence, Hepburn is the character she is to play for the camera. Therefore, she insists that visitors on the set when she is to play a heavy emotional scene, disturb her and put her somewhat out of key. Yes, a Hepburn discourse before the camera starts is generally interesting. Often more interesting than the script.

* * * *

Evelyn Poe, recently of Broadway, is playing a love scene with Johnny Mercer, who has played love scenes before, but never in front of a camera with everyone watching. Johnny is bashful. He holds Evelyn Poe meekly in his arms and hesitates to kiss her. "Hurry up," shouts Miss Poe, "or my option will be up."

Miss Poe is still going to school at the studio. Her teacher is a Miss Nelson, who declares Evelyn Poe is her pet. "I'm studying civics now," says Miss Poe. "They're teaching me to be a better citizen. I'm teaching the teacher bumps. She's a much better bumper than I am a citizen."

EPSOM DOWNS, England, June 4.—Famous Epsom Downs, where the first "darby" was run in 1780, again swarmed with gypsies and merry-go-rounds tonight as 17 3-year-olds awaited the start of tomorrow's classic.

The fact it's been called a "one-horse race," with the Aga Khan's undefeated Bahram a 5-to-4 favorite failed to dim popular enthusiasm.

Long before the meeting opened today the infield as far as the eye could see was crammed with the gay tents of the gypsies and scores of carnivals and other attractions which the race annually draws from all parts of the country.

For every bookmaker who is making Bahram a prohibitive favorite there are at least a hundred professional tipsters crying "I've got a horse," and offering the sure thing at long odds.

King to Attend.

They, like tens of thousands of other nomads, planned to spend the night beside camp fires in order to catch the first hordes who'll begin arriving from London soon after dawn.

Although King George has no derby entry this year, he and the royal family are expected to see the race along with several hundred thousand of his subjects.

Upon the result of the race hinged the distribution of upwards of ten million dollars to holders of tickets in the Irish Hospital and other sweepstakes. The persons fortunate enough to draw a ticket on the winner will receive close to $150,000 each from the Irish sweepstakes.

There were showers today, but there is no prospect of real rain tomorrow, promising a hard, fast track exactly to Bahram's liking.

Astor Horse Threat.

Many racing men see a distinct possibility of the Aga Khan winning the first three places with Bahram, Hairan and Theft.

Only one other entry, Field Trial, one of Lord Astor's horses, is regarded as a real threat to the stable of the wealthy, rotund Indian religious leader.

Lord Derby's Fairhaven and First Son are the other most popular choices.

The lone American-owned horse, Assignation, entered by Mrs. Corlette Glorney, moved up a notch in the final call over at the Victoria Club today but still was one of the outsiders at 33 to 1.

Hairan was quoted at 11 to 2 today while Theft was held at 10 to 1.

The odds held against the others were: Field Trial, 100-7; Sea Bequest, 100-6; First Son, 20-1; Fairhaven, 28-1; Fairbairn, 35-1; Screamer, 50-1; Robin Goodfellow, 60-1; Pry 2nd, 66-1; Plymouth Sound, 80-1; Japetus, 100-1; Peaceful Walter, 150-1, and Barberry and St. Botolph, 200-1.

Hartnett Is Batting Star As Cubs Beat Reds, 10-2

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Catcher Gabby Hartnett powered the Cubs to a one-sided 10-to-2 victory over Cincinnati in the opening game of their series today by hitting a homer, a triple and a single to drive in 6 runs and score 2 others. Hartnett's rampage was at the expense of Si Johnson, his triple with two on finally driving Johnson from the mound in the sixth.

Second Victory Won by Mrs. Moody

Wins in Straight Sets Over English Opponent by 6-1, 6-0 Scores.

By the Associated Press.

WEYBRIDGE, England, June 4. Helen Wills Moody, polishing up her net play here preparatory to entering the Wimbledon championships as the first real test of her comeback campaign, won her third round match in the St. George's Hill Tournament today with a straight set victory over Miss P. N. Morrison, 6—1, 6—0.

The former American champion is not scheduled to play tomorrow and said she might witness the running of the English Derby at Epsom Downs. In the quarter-finals Thursday she is matched with Miss Mary Hardwicke, one of the most promising of the younger British players.

Critics believe she will give Mrs. Moody a real test if she is not afflicted with stage fright.

The American played the same leisurely game she used to eliminate 18-year-old Jill Hotely, 6—3, 6—4, 6—0. However, her play failed to impress some of the critics who called attention to the fact that she frequently overdrove the base lines. Also, with no real incentive to open up, Mrs. Moody is making little effort to chase wide balls.

Feature at Belmont Taken by Mantagna

Outsider Wins 3-Year-Old Race in Stretch Drive.

By the Associated Press.

Belmont Park, N. Y., June 4.—The Maemere Farm's Mantagna, at the liberal odds of 6 to 1, ran back to his good second to the speedy Sergeant Byrne to capture the thirty-fifth running of The Swift, 7-furlong fixture for 3-year-olds, here this afternoon. The gelded son of Sweep, with Eddie Litzenberger handling the reins, came from behind to win going away by two lengths in the good time of 1:23 4-5. A steady rain did little harm to the racing strip.

Exhibit, representing Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, just lasted to nose out the Howe Stable's Nautch, while G. H. Bostwick's Ariel Cross was a close fourth. The crowd, cut down by the elements, saw nine horses go to the post, including J. E. Widener's Silversmith, an added starter which finished in the ruck. The winner's portion of the purse was $3,975.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye was favorite at 12 to 5. This fellow and Pompey's Pillar, which beat the latter, among others, in the Decoration Day Handicap at Rockingham, made sorry showings. Plat Eye went right to the front, but was through after racing with Exhibit in the first half-mile. Pompey's Pillar was far back all the way.

Exhibit opened up an apparently safe lead after disposing of Plat Eye. He seemed to have Nautch put away and headed for victory until Mantagna came along in the stretch to run over the two leaders as if much the best. Ariel Cross overcame early difficulties and ran a very good race to beat out Plat Eye.

72s by Metz and Barron Low as Practice Scores of Favorites Soar.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

OAKMONT, Pa., June 4.—Olin Dutra, the California man mountain who is to defend his national open golf championship here starting Thursday, walked off the ninth green today, and remarked to a couple of golf scribes: "This is the easiest looking tough course and the shortest looking long course I've ever tackled. A fellow can't believe what he sees. Any time you hole out in par, you're lucky."

He, like 50 other of the best players in the world had been through a strenuous workout which consisted of one furrowed bunker after another, and one lightning fast green after another.

With one more practice day left, the big shots of golfdom went about their tune-up rounds with an air of seriousness. Those little white balls started flying shortly after 8 o'clock this morning, and in the lengthening shadows of the evening the pellets continued to fill the air.

Barron, Metz Shoot 72's.

If practice scores mean anything to you, take notice of the par 72's reported by curly-haired Dick Metz, of Chicago and Herman Barron, of White Plains, N. Y., each went out in 38, but played spectacularly on that treacherous incoming nine for subpar 34's.

Al Houghton, one of four Washington, D. C., entrants in the Blue Ribbon classic, had a fine morning round of 74, the same reported by Charlie Yates, the drawling, sandy-haired Atlanta boy, who defends his national intercollegiate championship late this month in Houghton's home town.

George Von Elm, who had a marathon play-off with Billy Burke in the 1931 Open before he lost his putting touch, and lost by a shot, whacked out a 75, and in this class were Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, who led the Nation's sectional qualifiers, and Erie Ball.

Late today Gene Sarazen, 6-to-1 favorite, declaring he was fit as a fiddle, and Mr. Walter Hagen, fat and 40, went 18 holes with those very polite Japanese stars, Tommy Miyamoto and Seisui Chin.

Sarazen Scores a 76.

Between reprimanding his caddie for using questionable judgment in the selection of clubs and carrying on a conversation with the Nipponese in his own inimitable pig-Latin fashion, the cockey Sarazen had a heck of a time getting around the course in 76 blows.

Hagen, who picked up on one hole, did very well by himself, and putted like the Rochester kid of 1919. On the thirteenth hole the Haig sank a difficult curling 30-footer, an almost impossible putt, and the galleryites cheered lustily. Sarazen frowned. He still thinks they'll have to wheel out a rocking chair for Hagen before he gets past the 36-hole mark of this grueling three-day, 72-hole championship.

Regarded by many as the potential champion, Craig Wood shot a 76, and decided to call it a day. Wood was more interested in seeing the ball game between the Cards and Pirates.

Some of the golfers get quite a kick out of reporting practice scores. As Sarazen putted in for his par on this dangerous 473-yard eighteenth hole, he exclaimed, "Well, that gives me a 65." A lot of guys believed him.

Tommy Armour, the dour Scot who won the 1927 National Open at Oakmont, wouldn't divulge his score. He played with Bobby Cruickshank, who had a satisfactory sub-par 35 in a nine-hole morning round, and said he played well in the afternoon.

Hole In One by Hines.

Perhaps the most exciting news of the day was the hole in one made by Jimmy Hines, the earnest young Long Islander who refused to consider the number 13 unlucky, and knocked his five iron on this hole—a trap studded 164-yarder for an ace. Jimmy said his heart almost stopped beating.

On the previous hole, a 621-yarder, of course it's a par five, Hines had used up six strokes. So it was seven shots for the two holes.

4 Washingtonians Shoot in 70's in Open Practice Round.

By a Staff Correspondent.

OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, Oakmont, Pa., June 4.—Washington's four hopefuls in the National Open had to struggle for every shot before being lucky enough to score below the 80 mark in practice rounds today.

Al Houghton, Kenwood pro, did himself proud with a 74, 2 over par, after going out in 36. Houghton admitted it was a battle, even though it was just a workout. In the afternoon Houghton shot a 76.

Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, with a 5 on the 234-yard par-3 sixteenth and a birdie 3 on the seventeenth, reported an afternoon round of 75. Spencer last night won $25 in a driving contest near Oakmont. He hammered out a 287-yarder to beat out some well-known pros. "Well, that will help the old expenses," the Beaver Dam pro said.

His sub-par 70 of last Saturday is still the big talk around the locker room. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, couldn't do better than 77 today. Late today he went eight holes with Ky Laffoon, the Denver flash, and finished only 2 shots over par.

The Bethesda driving range professor, Leo Walper, reported 76 as his best score.

Houghton and Mackenzie have been hitting the ball beautifully off the tee, but are having trouble with their approach shots and putts. All you have to do is barely tap the ball and it runs a mile, the boys will tell you.

Jefferson All-Stars Bow to Eagles, 11-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4.—The Jefferson County All-Stars suffered their first defeat of the season at Ranson, bowing to the Great Cacapon Eagles, 11-2. Henry, Eagles hurler, was master of the situation throughout, holding the All-Stars scoreless except in the eighth inning. He gave but three hits and fanned nine. McGowan was the fielding star of the day, accepting eight chances without a miscue.

Dean Is Near Fight With Clubmate

Medwick Criticizes His Slow-ball Pitching as Pirates Win, 9-2.

Mound Ace Squares Off Against Outfielder; Words Exchanged.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, June 4.—Dizzy Dean, St. Louis pitcher extraordinary, today squared off with his teammate, Joe Medwick, but Brother Daffy Dean and other Cardinals rushed to the scene before the men exchanged anything more than words.

Although the grandstand view of the hostilities indicated that the Dean brothers were about to "mix it," later accounts brought out the fact that verbal strife broke out on the Cardinal bench in the fifth inning of today's game with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Dean's offerings were being soundly walloped by the Pirates, who won the encounter, 9 to 5. Medwick is said to have "jumped" Dizzy for the number of slow balls he was pitching—especially in the third inning when the Bucs netted four runs.

Resents Criticism.

According to the players' version, Dean resented the criticism of his pitching and suddenly the pair squared off in front of the bench. Daffy intervened as did other members of the team and the incident was over as quickly as it started.

Manager Frank Frisch grabbed Dizzy and led him away while Coach Mike Gonales, Pepper Martin, and Jimmy Collins soothed Daffy and Medwick.

Dean Is Wild.

The Pirates got only eight hits off the St. Louis ace, but they took advantage of his wildness to score four runs in each of the third and fifth innings. The final blow off Dean was Woody Jensen's home run clout into the stands in the sixth. He was lifted for a pinch hitter and Ed Heusser held the Bucs at bay during the remainder of the contest.

Pitts, Sing Sing Star, Barred From League

Minors' Chief Acts for "Best Interests of Game," He Says.

By the Associated Press.

DURHAM, N. C., June 4.—Judge W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, disclosed today he has advised the Albany baseball club that the association feels it would be against the best interests of baseball for it to sign "Alabama" Pitts, Sing Sing Prison's star athlete.

"The matter creates an unpleasant situation," said Judge Bramham, ruler of the minor leagues. "We all have a natural tendency to help the fellow who is down, but we believe the public would resent the signing of this player in organized baseball, and there are other troublesome complications which might arise.

"The question has been put before the executive committee of the association whose members concur in the opinion that the interests of the public, the game and the players in it would be best served by the action which has been taken."

Albany, N. Y., June 4 (AP).—General Manager John J. Evers of the Albany Senators in the International Baseball League said today the Senators would abide by the decision of Judge W. G. Bramham barring Alabama Pitts, young Sing Sing athlete, from entering professional baseball, pending an appeal.

Judge Bramham, president of the the National Association of Minor Professional Baseball Leagues, charged that Pitts' playing would be detrimental to professional baseball.

today that Pitts will make good. His charge will be released on parole Thursday.

Pitts came to the attention of the sports world several years ago when Lawes inaugurated football inside the prison walls.

It was reported that Pitts received offers from the Brooklyn Dodgers and several other major league clubs.

He was received at Sing Sing when he was 19 years old. He is 24 now. He was sentenced to serve an 8 to 16-year term following a holdup in New York. Three years' time was taken off his term for good behavior.

Browns Defeat Sox As Dykes Is Hurt

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 4.—Defeated by the Browns, 11 to 1, the Chicago White Sox today suffered further disaster when Jimmy Dykes, their scrappy manager, was assisted off the field with a sprained ankle.

Dykes, playing second because of an injury suffered by Minter Hayes, the regular Sox second baseman, collided with Jack Burns, who was stealing second.

Burns, Alan Strange, and Sammy West, were the big guns in the Brownie attack. After scoring two runs in the second, and four in the third, after two men were out, the Browns fell on the aging Dizzy Vance in the seventh to count five more.

Hadley Bows To Ferrell In Duel

Outfielder's Misplay in Sixth Aids 2 Boston Runs to Score.

Nats Make Only One of Their Nine Hits With Men on Bases.

By Shirley L. Povich.

THE losing streak of the Nats neared round figures yesterday when they contrived to accumulate their eighth straight defeat. There was some doubt about it all as late as the sixth inning, but the matter was cleared up to the satisfaction of the Boston Red Sox when Outfielder Johnny Stone permitted an ordinary single to roll through his legs for a two-base error.

The run that scored on the play and the run that was placed in scoring position by Stone's lapse represented the margin by which Wes Ferrell won a 3-2 pitching duel from Irving Hadley.

Both Ferrell and Hadley pitched nine-hit ball, but the slow stuff that the Boston right-hander served up to the Nats was no less effective than a Supreme Court decision. Eight of their nine hits the Nats made when they counted least. Only once did they slam the ball safely when a runner was on base.

Joe Cronin's Red Sox wiped out his pappy-in-law's 1-0 lead in the fifth inning and then stowed the game away in the sixth with the help of Stone. It was 1-1 when Cronin drew a walk in the sixth, and then things began to happen.

The next thing that happened was the single socked to right field by Carl Reynolds, a Washington alumnus. The next thing that happened, to the accompaniment of the moans of the 3,000 fans, was Stone's error. Reynolds' drive skidded through the territory bounded on the east by Stone's right ankle and bounded on the west by Stone's left ankle. When the ball rolled to the fence, Cronin scored all the way from first, Reynolds galloped to third and the Red sox had a 2-1 lead.

It was 3-1 when Oscar Melillo, Boston's $25,000 purchase from the Browns, slashed a single over Hadley's head to score Reynolds.

The Nats had taken a 1-0 lead in the fourth, when Stone opened the inning with a double and scored on Travis' single, the only occasion on which the Nats were able to put together even two hits. Back in the first inning, Heinie Manush, who had doubled to center with one out, perished on second.

Catch Up With Hadley.

Hadley was pitching three-hit ball when the Red Sox caught up with him after two were out in the fifth to tie the score. Dahlgren singled past Bluege and Wes Ferrell placed him in scoring position with

Boston Sports Writers Irate Over Treatment Given Babe

BOSTON, June 4 (U.P.).—The case of Babe Ruth versus Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, refused to down tonight.

Boston sports writers, regreting the manner of Ruth's passing, charged Fuchs with forcing Manager Bill McKechnie to issue the statement in which he charged that the Babe was responsible for the club's cellar position.

There was unanimity of opinion that Fuchs himself was definitely on the way out, being unable to meet heavy notes falling due on August 1.

Should Fuchs be unable to dispose of his mortgaged interests by that time, as he has expressed a readiness to do, the National League, already behind the club to the extent of guaranteeing the rent for Braves' Field, may have to find a syndicate of buyers for the property.

The writers were blunt in charging Fuchs with making McKechnie take the rap.

"Thus McKechnie accepts the 'buck' which was passed to him," said Joe Cashman in The American. ". . . It would set better if the 'prexy' assumed full responsibility now."

McKechnie Makes "Gesture."

George Carens in The Transcript referred to the McKechnie statement as 'a friendly gesture on the part of Bill to alleviate the extreme embarrassment of his boss" and "an effort on the part of Fuchs to put himself in a better light with the Boston public."

Victor Q. Jones, of the Globe, said the statement had "all the characteristics of a typical Fuchs' statement" and that "the whole blame for the Ruth fiasco rests squarely on Judge Fuchs' shoulders."

The "exoneration" of McKechnie harmonized with Ruth's own feelings, and the fact that the Braves' manger bade Ruth a warm "bon voyage."

Informed Ruth wanted his Braves uniform—probably his last—as a keepsake, club Secretary Ed Cuningham said by all means he could have it but that he'd have to ask for it in person. "We don't want it tossed back in our faces."

Braves Lost $44,308.

A sidelight on the Braves' financial condition was gleaned from an annula statement filed at the State House revealing a net loss of $44,308 in 1934. Notes and acceptables payable increased from $155,000 at the end of 1933 ot $205,000 at end of 1934. Rent for Braves field was cut from $40,000 to $36,667. The club's Nattional League franchise was listed as worth $201,000 and player contracts at $98,534, both unchanged.

The Braves, bent on getting "new blood," today announced the signnig of Pitcher Danny MacFayden, veteran right-hander, and were reported negotiating with Willie Kamm, the veteran infielder.

Veteran Shanks Pilots Four Winning Horses at Charles Town

Jockey Rides Both Ends of Double

Flit Out Steals Third to Pay Mutuel of $29.80.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 4.—Johnny Shanks, a veteran jockey who married a Washington girl and now makes his home in the Nation's Capital, had a field day in the saddle this afternoon, winning four of the seven races on the program at this mountain race track. Chief among his accomplishments for the day was the feat of riding both ends of a $142 daily double.

The skinny fellow began the day with Spero in the first race. He whipped this mare into the lead and then hustled her all the way to coast home five lengths in front of the nearest opposition. The winning mutuel was $5.

Shanks didn't have a mount in the second race but in the third he completed the daily double with Flit Out. The jockey "stole" the race. From number 1 post position, Shanks must have anticipated the break for he sent Flit Out away from the gate flying and was drawing out to a long lead before the other boys knew the race had begun. The pay-off on this one was $29.80.

In the fourth race, Shanks held the gelding, 'Ado, off the pace set by Inscription, the favorite, until reaching the stretch turn. At this point, Inscription swung wide and Shanks cut through on the rail to drive his mount to a head victory. Ado was an $8.40 pay-off.

Our hero had no assignment in the fifth, but he had one in the sixth. It was Tristrap and the son of Satrap proved the Capital ride's fourth winner in four tries. Breaking from the outside post position, Shanks had to do a lot of hustling and scuffling to get Tristrap into a contending position. Once near the leaders, he gave the horse a breathing spell and then went on to take the lead. He came to the wire two lengths in front of Justa Teacher, a long shot trying to awake. Tristrap paid $7.60.

Jockey Eddie Jones was tossed among the flying hoofs of the leaders in the race when Red Riot stumbled at the far turn. The boy was brought to the track hospital, where it was said that he suffered a broken foot.

The day was not without a ruling from the stewards. Eddie Steinmier, a Baltimore boy with a yen to ply a saddle trade, was suspended for five days for rough riding "soon after the start of the fifth race."

Some 3,000 persons witnessed the program run over a fast track. The betting was heavier in every department than previous week days. The $648 daily double of yesterday proved a good advertisement, the twin betting pool reaching $1,894, almost $500 more than on Monday.

Mrs. Meckley Takes Medal in Qualifying Round of Md. Golf

Local Woman Leads Field With 84

Manor Club Star Shoots Whirlwind Game on Back Nine.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 4.—Mrs. Betty Meckley, of the Manor Club, scored an 84 today to win the qualification honors in the eighteen-hole medal round of the Maryland women's golf championship today at Rolling Road Golf Club.

The Washington Club swinger, whose tournament appearance during the past two years have been curtailed on account of illness, played the back nine, the harder of the two, in 40 strokes.

Mrs. Meckley's card:

Out..... 4 6 4 3 4 5 8 5 5—44
In..... 3 6 6 5 3 5 5 4 3—40—84

Mrs. Meckley, after a brilliant iron shot at the first hole, got a par 4. However, the wind baffled her at the second and she took a 6 to drop two strokes to par. She also had trouble at the seventh and took an 8. The worst figure on her card coming back was a 6. She took a 6 at the eleventh and also at the twelfth, but these two holes are the longest on the course.

Players with scores of 97 or better qualified for the first 16, which will begin match play tomorrow at the Catonsville course.

5 Local Women Play.

Five Washingtonians will engage tomorrow in match play. Miss Dettweiler, who won the championship last year at Elkridge, was qualified automatically by the Maryland State Golf Association. She was graduated today from Trinity College.

Other qualifying scores included: Mrs. L. D. Pray, Manor, 93; Elizabeth Brawner, Columbia, 95; Mrs. Jack Scott, Congressional, 97.

Pairings tomorrow for the first sixteen included: Mrs. Becky Meckley, Manor, vs. Mrs. W. Bahn, Baltimore; Mrs. Jack Scott, Congressional, vs. Mrs. R. C. Stewart, jr., Green Spring Valley; Mrs. L. D. Pray, Manor, vs. Mrs. W. F. Peterson, Elkridge; Mrs. Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, vs. Miss Elizabeth Brawner, Columbia.

Chatterfol Wins Detroit Purse in Sketch Rush

Detroit, June 4 (AP).—Chatterfol, the Saddle Spur Stable's 5-year-old gelding, staged a rush in the stretch today to beat out Injustice by a head in the Kalamazoo Purse, 6-furlong feature race, at the Detroit race track. The track was muddy and the time was 1:15 3-5.

Chatterfol's victory was a double for Jockey Eddie Legere, who booted Prince Drake home to win by a nose in the preceding race.

Injustice, a Detroit-owned entry, led most of the way in the feature and finished driving, a length and a half ahead of Amy Cooper.

Chatterfol paid his backers $8.60 for $2.

Chilla May, winner of the first race, and Blind Pig, winner in the second, paid $494.80 for $2 in the daily double.

Latonia, Ky., June 4 (AP).—The success which has attended the stable of H. W. and W. J. Young, Louisville sportsmen, continued as Best Bid annexed the Elmwood Purse, feature on today's eight-race card.

The track was vastly improved today and Best Bid covered the three-quarters in 1:14 1-5. She paid $7 to win in the mutuels.

Joe Louis Perfects Two-Fisted Body Attack for Carnera Bout

Negro Vastly Improved as Fighter

Quick to Capitalize on Openings; Punishes His Sparmates.

(This is the fourth and last of a series of articles on the training camps of boxers preparing for important contests this month.)

By Bill McCormick.

JOE LOUIS' training camp at Pompton Lakes, N. J., is a busy workshop where the finishing touches are being put on a great fighting machine.

By the time Chief Engineer John Roxborough and Master Mechanic Jack Blackburn finish oiling and polishing the automaton from Detroit, he may not be the consummate fighting machine he will be some day, but he will be tuned and adjusted to destroy Ponderous Primo Carnera when they meet June 25.

Before watching Louis train and getting behind the scenes at Pompton, the writer was of the opinion that Carnera would prove a difficult problem for the Black Bomber, purely because of styles. We realized that the Louis who so badly battered Natie Brown was a great fighter in the making and admitted that there were probably a half-dozen mediocre heavyweights who could flatten Carnera if they were not handcuffed.

Louis Short Puncher.

Our belief that Louis would have trouble disposing of Pitiful Primo was based on the fact that Louis, a short puncher, might be expected to encounter difficulty getting past the waving left hand of Carnera. We reasoned that once he got within punching range, Joe would not be able to wallop because the 270-pound Primo would drape his hulk about the Black Diamond's shoulders and loll until the clinch was broken up. Even at that, we still thought Louis would find some way to get over a refrigerating punch before the bout was over.

Now we not only believe Louis will get over that punch, but as many as he choses and at practically any time during the contest. For the Louis of this training camp is a Louis 1,000 per cent improved over the Louis who made a monkey of Natie Brown just a few months ago.

Everything that Louis does in the ring he does right—or not at all. Against Brown, there were too many things he did not do. Now there are very few things he does not do, and those tricks of the ring he hasn't mastered he is practicing.

Show Against Brown.

In the Brown fight, Louis was slow to take advantage of openings left when Natie swung, missed and went away off balance. At Pompton, Louis is taking advantage of every opening. In the Brown fight Louis did not impress as an infighter. He is practicing up on that and may have quite a two-fisted body attack ready for Carnera, most certainly will have it in good working order for Baer.

Louis' sparmates are not particularly good, but they are big—and big men are exactly what the Bronze Buddha needs to belt about while preparing for this fight. Leonard Dixon, the elongated heavyweight who was in Washington with Ray Impellittiere was one of the trio of dusky sparmates on hand the day we visited camp. He is just a mediocre fighter. Ciel Harris, who weighs about 290 pounds and is taller than Carnera, also was on hand. Ace Clark, another bigger-than-Primo mass of ebony flesh, was present also. He is perhaps the best fighter of the lot.

Watching the Workout.

Let us watch them work.

Harris is first in the ring. They square off and Ciel holds his left way out, as does Carnera. Now we shall see how Louis trys to reach a big guy. Joe shuffles in—faster than he has been in the past—and his head reaches Harris' outstretched left. Getting past that bludgeon is the problem. Louis' head begins to bob and suddenly he ducks under the extended arm.

Whamf goes a left hook to the body which almost doubles the sparmate. Harris instinctively drops his left just a trifle, and a trifle is all that is needed. Bang! goes that same left to the head—as pretty a one-two as the ring has seen since the heyday of Dempsey. The ebon punching bag wobbles and Joe instinctively rushes in for the kill, but suddenly realizes this isn't a money fight and draws back. Harris' legs are like hinged stilts and they stay that way throughout the round.

The spectators are almost relieved as Harris when Ciel leaves the ring all in one piece. One of Louis' wallops to the face has drawn blood. Harris is wiping the crimson from his coal-black features as he stumbles from the ring and approaches Roxborough, Louis' manager.

"Jawn," he mumbles as he displays a 16-ounce glove saturated in his own gore, "Jawn, Ah's in de red—I gotta have a raise."

Clark Next Victim.

Now comes Clark. He is the giant who was giving Carnera fits in a 1930 bout until Providence, under the guise of a referee too solicitous over the welfare of Primo, stopped the contest—and awarded it to Carnera!

"Ah wuz lickin' Carnera then, an' I kin do it agin," Clark insists. "He wuz a bettah fightah then than he is now."

"Kin you lick Joe Louis?" jibes a leather-lunged Senegambian as Clark enters the ring.

"Oh, hush yo' mouf, vitafoam," Clark scowls back, eyeing Louis apprehensively. "You' wanna git me massacreed in heah?"

Louis wastes no time on this one. He ducks under the left and shoots that one-two left from head to body within a few seconds. Clark is out on his feet. Joe tries to pull his punches, but can't do that any more than could Dempsey. So, he backs off and amuses himself by feinting Clark off guard. He feints with his head, with arms, with his body, with his knees. It is a masterful exhibition of an almost lost art. Clark finally recovers a bit, and Louis gets inside to practice shooting both hands to the midsection—something he did not do in the Brown fight.

Louis leaves the ring and punches a few holes in the heavy bag. Following that he is rubbed down and turns over to grab a few of the 12 hours sleep he gets every day.

Carnera Easy Mark.

We haven't seen Carnera in training for the Louis bout, but we have seen him fight enough to know he has nothing to offset the ringmanship and punch of Louis. There is only one doubt as to Louis' greatness—or potential greatness—as a fighter and that is whether or not he can absorb a stiff wallop to the noggin without folding. Carnera has not the punch to test that.

How long will Carnera last

"About four or five rounds," predict both Louis and Roxborough modestly. We say modestly because we believe Louis will have the Ambling Alp groveling in the canvas within one minute. How many times Carnera will grovel before the final long count, of course, all depends.

Louis' feinting will help immeasureably. Carnera is "gun shy" since the Baer bout. If feinted, he waves his hands helplessly about his head, leaving a million openings for a trained sharpshooter. Louis may feint him to death.

Carnera can be reached and set down with a left hook to the body. Sharkey did it in their first bout, and almost did it in their second. And, compared to Louis' siege-gun left hook, the Sharkey weapon was a popgun.

Louis Easy to Handle.

Louis is perhaps the easiest fighter in the world to handle, if he gets his 12 hours' sleep a day. He rises early, takes a ride, a nap, does roadwork, takes a nap, eats, takes a nap, has lunch and a nap, works out, takes a nap, rises for dinner, takes a nap and goes to bed very, very sleepy about 9 o'clock. He says very little, 10 or 12 words being his allotment for every 24 hours, unless he talks in his sleep.

N.Y. Ring Body Ends Ross Argument

Commission Squelches Pop Foster's Plea to Change Decision.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 4.—"Pop" Foster, grizzled old manager of Jimmy McLarnin, asked the New York State Athletic Commission today to put aside the decision Barney Ross scored over his warrior in the Polo Grounds a week ago tonight. "Pop" lost the decision unanimously, just as McLarnin did.

"Pop" was summoned to explain his actions in publicly criticizing, just before the fight started, the choice of Jack Dempsey as referee on the grounds that Jack "was too friendly with the fellows in the other camp." Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, rebuked "Pop" at the ringside, and was equally stern today.

"Dempsey is beyond reproach," Phelan told Foster. "He did a splendid job of refereeing. Furthermore, the decision giving Ross the welterweight title was unanimous, so there is no reason for you to reproach Dempsey alone for his decision, regardless of whether it was right or wrong."

Commission Says No.

Specifically Foster asked the commission to set the decision aside and to order McLarnin and Ross to fight all over again for the title, dividing the purse equally. The commission said "No" and explained that it was not in the matchmaking business.

Foster complained that Mike Jacobs, promoter of the match, promised that Dempsey wouldn't referee. Dempsey, probably without thinking that he might be called upon for work that night, although he is a licensed referee and at the call of the commission, was one of the long list of those who publicly picked Ross to win before the fight.

Jacobs explained that he merely told Foster that he couldn't afford to pay Dempsey the fee of $1,200 he asks for special assignment as a referee. Named by the commission, Dempsey received only the usual $200 fee. Phelan explained that Dempsey wasn't decided upon as referee by the commission until a few moments before the main bout.

Cantwell Says Braddock Will Win

Former Trainer of Baer Claims Challenger Is Best Man.

By the Associated Press.

LOCHSHELDRAKE, N. Y., June 4.—If Mike Cantwell's opinion is any good, James J. Braddock is the next world heavyweight champion.

The former trainer of Max Baer saw the challenger in a stiff workout this afternoon, sparring four rounds, two against Don Petrin and one each with Jack McCarthy and Paul Pross. He was vicious, more so than he has been in the three weeks he has been training.

No sooner were the indoor sparring stunts concluded than Cantwell, an old training hand, stated:

"Braddock has a splendid chance; on second thought, I think he'll win. He has the weapons to lick Baer. They consist of left uppercuts and left hooks to the body, and right-hand smashes to the kidneys. Braddock is a much better boxer than Baer. No buffoonery with him, just hard work. He has the finest set of sparring partners I've ever seen.

"Baer is going back. He reached his peak knocking out Max Schmeling and hasn't been any good since."

Before he climbed through the ropes Braddock jumped on the scales and tipped the beam at the 198 notch.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 4 (AP).—Max Baer gave his sparring partners a rough afternoon as he went through 12 rounds of boxing today.

Eddie Haughton, Philadelphia heavyweight who is helping the champion prepare for his bout with Jim Braddock on June 13, apparently nettled Baer by sticking left jabs in his face and as a result found himself the target of some heavy jolting. The champion shot several right-hand blows to Haughton's head that looked as though they might sink the sparring partner, and Trainer Dolph Thomas had to caution Baer to slow down.

Haughton went only one round and then Diamond Jackson climbed through the ropes for four rounds. Bob Fraser boxed three, most of which he went in back-pedaling before the onrushing Baer. Paul Cavalier boxed two and then Al Truhlman wound up the session by stepping one fast canto.

Slim Rosie Winner Of Oak Ridge Purse

Favorite Beats Field at Washington Park.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 4.—Slim Rosie, 3-year-old daughter of Tryster—Rockland, racing for the Chicago firm of Aarons and Weil, scored in the Oak Ridge purse today at Washington Park in a sensational stretch run over the six-furlongs route. Ridden by Jockey Jack Westrope, Slim Rosie won by one length over Col. Edward R. Bradley's Blessed Again. Star Banner, Sporting the silks of Thomas Piatt, finished third.

Eltebe bolted at the stretch turn, crashed through the outer railing and was severely injured. Jockey Charley Landolt was thrown heavily to the ground, but was only shaken up.

Slim Rosie, public choice, covered the distance in 1:14 and paid $3.96.

The Darb, Favorite, Wins Salem Purse

By the Associated Press.

Salem, N. H., June 4.—Looking and acting and running like the 3-to-5 favorite he was, The Darb rollicked to victory in the feature race at Rockingham Park today.

The 5-year-old C. V. Whitney horse, with Alfred Robertson up, finished last only a few days ago, when he was the people's choice to win, but with the same populace cheering him on today, he closed with a rush to win the 6 furlongs by a length from Wise Anne.

Wise Anne and Bright Phantom set the pace until the head of the stretch, but when Robertson called on The Darb he rumbled up on the outside to win easily.

Golden Fate finished third.

a walk. Almada's single to center brought him home. Werber's walk filled the bases, but Hadley disposed of Bob Johnson on a fly to Manush for the third out.

After the Red Sox took that 3-1 lead in the sixth, Ferrell did a fine job of frustrating the Nats. Buddy Myer singled with one out in the fifth and was out, stealing. Stone led off the sixth with a double, but his mates couldn't advance him. Hadley doubled in the seventh and perished on second, and after Travis opened the eighth with a single, Powell hit into a double play.

Hope flamed anew in the ninth when Cliff Bolton lashed a long triple to center field, but it sagged immediately when Bluege fouled to Johnson. Pinch-Hitter Fred Schulte could only ground to Werber, Bolton scoring on the play, and their eighth straight licking was an established fact when Myer was thrown out by Melillo.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

UNLESS yesterday's rain has unusual effects, anglers can expect bay fishing to hit a new peak by the end of the week. Only boisterous winds and a sudden drop in temperature will put the quietus on full strings.

Croakers seem fairly abundant now at most good points. They are running to decent size. A few nice sea trout have been reported, mostly from off Point Lookout way, although the Honga is fair.

Blues have been reported as far up as opposite Sharpe's Island by Capt. Noah Hazard, who long-distanced a friend yesterday that he had passed through a large school. The best catches of them, however, are being made at Southwest Middles where they congregated in huge schools, together with channel bass and numerous croakers. Chumming seems to have furnished the one sure way of getting them.

Ocean Lures Many.

The ocean resorts right now afford excellent sport with Wachapreague, Chincoteague and Ocean City well in the limelight.

Fox Hill Levels, 15 miles south of Ocean City, has been the scene of numeous catches of large channel bass the past few days. Since the cutting of the inlet, anglers have to cross the bay at this point on a little ferry boat. This operates constantly to take care of those wishing to go across.

King fish have just started to bite in the surf at this point, ditto croakers. Croakers also are being caught in small numbers on the pier at Ocean City.

The weaks are plentiful and they average from 5 to 9 pounds. Blues are almost as numerous as they recently were at Oregon Inlet, every outside paty seeming to bring in all they desire. Sea bass and porgie are lending variety to the catches.

W. M. Krise, J. T. Bodman, Winchester, Va.; G. T. Halfrick, J. T. Ridgeway, both of Baltimore, and Dr. Stultz and Linwood Kight, Hagerstown, flew over to Ocean City, over the week-end, with air pilot Tommy Thompson, of Baltimore, the party landing 300 pounds of sea bass and nine weaks from 7 to 9 pounds. They went out with Capt. S. C. Carpenter.

Proof that the blues are plentiful at Ocean City is proven by the fact commercial fishing boats are now putting in there from numerous Virginia, New Jersey and New York ports.

Wachapreague Worth While.

If you're after a few days' decent fishing and relaxation among satisfactory surroundings, we urge you to tackle Wachapreague one of these days. You can get unusual hotel accommodations for $4 a day with an abundance of excellent food. There are several hotels there, with the Wachapreague, owned by A. H. G. Mears, modern enough to suit any taste.

Boats are plentiful and lower than at any other point on the coast. Only $6 a day for the first man and $2 for extra members of the party.

There are many, many miles of sheltered inlets filled with weak, croakers and kings. Channel bass and blue fishing is done either from the beach at Cedar Island or else from boats moored just outside the surf off Holly Island.

J. Wolf & Co., sporting goods dealers at 1332 H street northeast, are trying out a fine idea on Thursday morning that ought to make a hit with a lot of anglers. They are going to stage a fisherman's party down to the most likely spot on the bay.

Any angler wishing to go along is invited to telephone his name before noon Wednesday to Mr. L. L. Sterner, Lincoln 4546. All expenses of bait, gasoline and boat will be prorated among those who go. The man catching the largest fish will be the guest of the crowd.

Quite a few have signified their desire to go along and if the plan works, they will be held once a month.

Tricky Course Balks Pros In Trials

part in the winning of the championship was divided tonight.

Cruickshank, who has flirted with three National Open titles and expects to crash through this week, still thinks they're going to pay off on the green. But oddly enough, Cruicky is attempting to strengthen his wood play, and, as a result of trouble he has been having with his wood clubs, "swiped" a new brassie and driver from Jimmy Thomson, of California—rated the longest driver in the world. The clubs, according to Cruicky, are working to perfection.

Few Chances for Chips.

But from MacDonald Smith, the Carnoustie Scot, comes the statement that the second shots will either make or break your prospective champion. Smith, during his tour of the course, said that there wasn't a hole on the course that offered one much chance to chip.

"You've got to know how to reach the green in 2 or 3, depending on your holes," the sturdy Scot said. "I don't think the chipping is going to be so hard."

But Willie MacFarlane, who thinks the 294 he scored in winning the Pennsylvania Open at Oakmont last year, will stand up easily, firmly believes that the driver will be mightier than any other instrument in the bag.

"There are too many bunkers on that course," the Tuckahoe stylist said, "and if a golfer can steer clear of them from the tee, he's the man to reckon with. That's why Harry Cooper, who tied with Armour eight years ago here, has a great chance. Harry is the steadiest man I know with tee shot."

Bunkers Seen As Test.

Your corespondent has his own opinion—something none of the 30-odd pros he spoke to today touched on. That is the real test—or may we say acid test—will come down in those furrowed, cavernous bunkers. Today some of the boys found their stray shots so deeply imbedded in the furrows that they were lucky to get out in two.

It's dollars to golf balls that this championship will be decided with the "dynamiter" and the blaster. Thus, famous trap-shot artists such as Sarazen, Paul Runyan, Hagen, Cooper and Wood will have a distinct advantage.

Henry Picard, the young Hershey, Pa., pro who has been hinted as the man who will wear the crown by Sunday morning, made quite an interesting remark. While gulping down a coke by his locker, Picard said that Oakmont "is the only course in the world than can make a fool out of the best golfer." Picard wasn't pleased with his 76 today.

Odds and Ends From Gallico Clean Up the Sports Situation

NEW YORK, June 4.—By printing Braddock above Baer on the three-sheets, Jimmy Johnston upset a tradition. It's like billing Izzy the Painter or Joe the Fleabag above Nelson Eddy; Baer is hollering murder. . . . Another fielder like Ben Chapman and the Yanks would breeze in. . . . Correct spelling of defending U. S. Open golf king is Olin Dutra. . . . John Tunis knows more tennis than anybody else in America next to Bill Tilden. A player failed to show in Davis Cup tryouts at White Sulphur a few years back and Tunis, aged 40, was asked to fill in with a polite beating. He swamped his first-round opponent and gave Wilmer Allison a tough ride before bowing . . . Since Jed Gahan refereed Eddie Risko vs. Vince Dundee he has not had an asignment. . . . Babe Ruth's annuities will pay him $500 a month in 1938.

Henry Picard never had golf lessons . . . Babe Didrikson, Helen Hicks and Joyce Wethered will try to chisel columns of free space for sporting goods houses during the summer.

Stories that vice barons are behind Carnera and Louis are untrue. Traders Hope For New NRA; Bid Up Stocks

Staples' Strength Aids Leading Shares in General Upturn.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Stocks responded with alacrity today to favorable outside influences, and a quiet buying movement sent many active issues ahead major fractions to around 3 points.

Wall Street's gaze was bent on Washington, and there was a lively anticipation that a plan would be evolved which might preserve some of the advantages of NRA, while eliminating its unconstitutional features.

Stocks were aided by active buying sentiment in the major staples. Commodity traders thought that the President, in outlining a "constitutional NRA," might also point the way toward conserving some of the features of the Agricultural Adjustment act, whose fate in the event of a Supreme Court test had been considered doubtful.

During stock market hours the leading foreign monies gave a relatively steady performance in exchange dealings, and the fall of the French Cabinet on its request for extraordinary financial powers came too late to be a factor in securities.

Late in the day, however, French francs met heavy offerings well below the best levels of the day, and the news from Paris, which was unexpected here, found the exchange market in a rather demoralized state. The pound sterling advanced as the franc slumped.

The better tone of the stock market was accompanied by some pickup in volume, although the day's turnover, at 868,500 shares, was something less than brisk.

Wheat Jumps Nearly 2 Cents

Market Ignores Estimates of Largest Wheat Crop Since 1932.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Halting its recent downward trend, the wheat market advanced almost 2 cents in a brisk rally just before the close today, reflecting outstanding strength displayed by wheat at Liverpool.

Normally more or less sensitive to fluctuations in the British market, the Chicago pit today showed a pronounced sympathetic movement, largely ignoring bearishness coincident with a favorable domestic crop situation, with private authorities predicting a total United States wheat yield this year 40 per cent larger than last year's small production.

When the definite upward trend in wheat appeared, shorts moved to cover, accentuating the rise. Wheat closed 1¼ to 1⅞ cents above the previous finish, July 83⅞@84. Corn was ⅛ to ½ higher, July 80¾@80⅞; oats unchanged to ⅜ lower; rye, ⅜ to ½ up, and barley, unchanged.

There was little response to the release of private crop estimates which were believed to have been largely discounted.

The average of five statisticians' figures as of June 1 indicated a total wheat crop of 709,000,000 bushels, compared with a final crop in 1934 of 496,000,000. Indicated winter wheat production was placed at 496,000,000 bushels compared with 432,000,000 a month ago, while the spring wheat forecast was 240,000,000 compared with the 1934 crop of 91,000,000. Although subject to change due to future weather conditions, the indicated total wheat crop is the largest since 1932, and the spring wheat estimate is the highest since 1927, when 245,527,000 bushels were harvested.

Legal Lights Hold Guffey Bill Invalid

Franc Falls With Sudden Collapse Of Bouisson Rule

By the Associated Press.

The French franc broke wide open in late foreign exchange dealings in New York yesterday, while the pound sterling soared. The selling wave followed the sudden resignation of the Bouisson government.

In late New York dealings the French unit was off .04⅝ of a cent to 6.58⅜ cents, and again below the level at which it is profitable to ship gold from Paris to New York. The pound sterling was up 4¼ cents to $4.97.

Executives of Financial Institutions Pushing Plans for Early Modification of Laws Restricting Investments; Would Buy Industrial Bonds.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 4.—Ideas of savings bankers on the subject of a revision of existing legal restrictions on investments of such institutions are slowly being crystallized. A number of States will probably effect basic modifications of such laws during the next two years. These will affect considerably the relative market status of various groups of high-grade bonds.

New York State's law governing investments of mutual savings banks and trustees has been something of a model, and a number of other States have passed similar enactments. More than $5,000,000,000 of mutual savings bank deposits in New York State and even larger amounts of trust funds have been invested in accordance with its provisions. Apart from Government obligations and real estate first mortgages, this law forces the large institutional investors subject to its provisions to favor railroad and public utility operating company securities.

Since 1930 only a very few railroads have been able to conform with the requirements of this law that interest be earned 1½ times in five out of six years before investment. However, in order to protect the enormous existing holdings of railroad bonds of the savings banks and trust companies, laws have been passed yearly by the New York Legislature ignoring earnings of the depression years in determining the legal status of railroad bonds. Hence, railroad bonds which were legal in 1930 and are not now in default remain on the legal list, even though interest on them is not being earned.

New Funds Increase Desire to Have Situation Clarified.

This anomalous situation obviously can not last. In the meanwhile, the volume of funds available for investment in the hands of savings banks and trust companies mounts steadily, especially since there is a general disposition to keep down holdings of real estate mortgages. Accordingly, savings bank officials and trust officers are becoming more eager to see a modernization of institutional investment laws. Business recovery makes them less fearful that wholesale liquidation of impaired bonds might result. While considerable additional study is likely before leading States will modify their laws on this subject, there is evident growing support for a few basic principles to guide the revision of these statutes. Bills embodying these principles will probably be drafted for the next sessions of several State Legislatures.

The most important proposed change upon which there is general agreement is that the artificial favor shown railroad securities in present institutional investment laws should be ended. The record of the railroads during the current depression and the growth in recent decades of a number of other basic industries that furnish equal or better investment opportunities make such a change overdue, it is contended.

Instead, it is proposed to base institutional investment restrictions on basic standards, without mention of particular industries. This would throw open the whole public utility field, all industrials and even investment trust issues to institutional investment, provided particular issuers meet the criteria set up in the law. The criteria proposed includes a requirement that the issuer of its predecessors shall have been in business a stated minimum number of years, that the company shall be above a certain minimum size, and that earnings shall have covered dividends a stated number of times during a period of years.

Will Encourage More Industrial Bond Issues.

One result of such revision of institutional investment restrictions, it is expected, will be to encourage industrial corporations to resort to bond financing. Until recently, railroads have been able to finance at a much lower rate of interest than industrials, since their obligations have found a ready market among financial institutions that were not able to purchase most other types of corporate obligations. That is one reason why so many railroad bonds carry a coupon of 4 per cent or even less, while until recently industrial obligations with a coupon of less than 5 per cent were few and far between. A second reason was the fact that many railroads had undergone financial reorganization, in the course of which coupon rates were scaled down.

Recently, industrial bonds with a coupon rate of 4 per cent have become more common. During the current wave of corporate refunding, even lower rates have been placed on the strongest credits. These bonds are being purchased by financial institutions which are not restricted narrowly, as are mutual savings banks, by existing investment laws.

There is a small group of more radical thinkers among executives of financial institutions who feel that they should be allowed to purchase common stocks up to a certain amount, under strict safeguards. This is based upon the fear of inflation, and the desire to protect the purchasing power of beneficiaries of trust funds where no permission was originally given to buy bonds, and of savings bank depositors. However, the majority view is that the risks which inhere in the purchase of equities should be avoided, despite the much-discussed threat of Government monetary measures which may lead eventually to a rise in commodity prices and a fall in the purchasing power of fixed investment income.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Substantially higher velocity of money circulation in Washington during the initial five months of 1935 was revealed yesterday when the Washington Clearing House announced that clearings were 24 per cent ahead of the 1934 period.

Checks passing through the clearing center during the five months aggregate $360,041,780, a gain of $70,043,274 over the $289,998,505 reported during the corresponding period a year ago.

Totals reported during recent months have been steadily increasing the lead over the same months of 1934. Whereas in January clearings were running less than $14,000,000 over the same month of 1934, during the past two months the gain has been increased to more than $16,000,000.

Commodities Leaders In Market Advance

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Commodities led a sweeping recovery in speculative markets today. Cotton futures rose about $1.50 to $1.75 a bale in the New York Cotton Exchange. On the Chicago Board of Trade wheat futures advanced 1¼ to nearly 2 cents a bushel. Among the smaller futures markets in New York, silk advanced 2¼ to 3½ cents a pound, raw sugar about .10 of a cent, hides about .40 of a cent, and rubber around .30 of a cent a pound.

Central Bank Of Argentina Ready to Open

Revaluation of Gold Not to Affect Peso in U. S. Exchange.

Buenos Aires, June 4.—The official inauguration of Argentina's Central Bank, of which Ernesto Bosch, formerly foreign minister, is the first president, will take place on Thursday. The Department of Finance has issued a decree containing the twenty-eight articles which specify the operations entailed in the bank's constitution.

Gold in the conversion office will be transferred to the Central Bank and revalued at the rate of 25 pesos to the golden sovereign. Part of the credit margin created by this revaluation will be utilized to cover the government's subscription to the capital of the bank, and 380,000,000 pesos will be used as a reserve fund for use during the initial process of thawing out frozen bank assets.

Part of the credit margin will also be utilized to create the initial 10,000,000 pesos capital in the liquidation institute. About 150,000,000 pesos will be applied to reductions in the Federal indebtedness to the Banco de la Nacion, and a further balance of about 200,000,000 pesos will be held in reserve pending international stabilization of currencies. This utilization of excess gold does not affect in any way the exchange value of the peso, the official rate remaining at about 33 cents United States to the peso.

Canada's Exports Make Big Stride

Gain Exceeded Only by That of Malay States.

By the Associated Press.

Montreal, June 4.—Canadian exports for 1934 showed a greater gain in value than those of any other country except the British Malay states, according to the monthly letter issued today by the Royal Bank of Canada.

The value of Canadian exports to countries other than those within the British Empire and to the United States declined by $15,000,000 between the fiscal years 1933 and 1935. In the same interval sales to the British Empire increased by $119,000,000 and those to the United States by $81,000,000, a combined increase of $200,000,000.

Between 1933 and 1935 Canadian exports to empire countries, other than Great Britain, increased by more than 100 per cent. Next in importance to Canadian exports to Great Britain and the United States stands exports to Australia.

Foreign Buying Carries Cotton Up $2 Per Bale

Local and New Orleans Purchases Help Sharp Rally.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Cotton rallied more than $2 a bale today and about $3.50 per bale above last Saturday's low levels on active foreign demand. Final prices were at net advances of 40 to 45 points.

Initial advances were in sympathy with relatively firm cables and on Liverpool and continental buying. There was also local and New Orleans buying or covering.

Complaints of a poor crop start and expectations that Administration proposals expected before the end of the day would clarify some phases of the recovery program were contributing factors. Spot houses also absorbed limited contracts and reactions from the best were restricted to a few points.

Two private crop estimates were issued. One pointed to a possible production of from 10,000,000 to 10,500,000 bales and the other to 11,319,000 bales. End of May condition indications ranged from 70.3 to 75.1 and acreage from 29,135,000 to 29,856,000 in these two reports.

Bonds Higher In All Groups

Recovery Developments Are Expected in Washington.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Listed loans took their cue from stocks today and the bond market improved substantially in virtually all departments. Both traders and investors seemed to feel that imminent recovery developments at Washington would prove bullish and that the Administration would be able to salvage major portions of the NRA.

Indications that business and industry as a whole throughout the country would make every effort to maintain their codes of wages and working hours whether the Government's recovery program is revived or not was interpreted in the financial district as a favorable influence on senior securities.

United States Government securities were quiet and slightly irregular most of the day, but the majority finished with small advances. Trading in all bonds picked up considerably, transfers totaling $9,498,000, par value, compared with $6,756,000 yesterday.

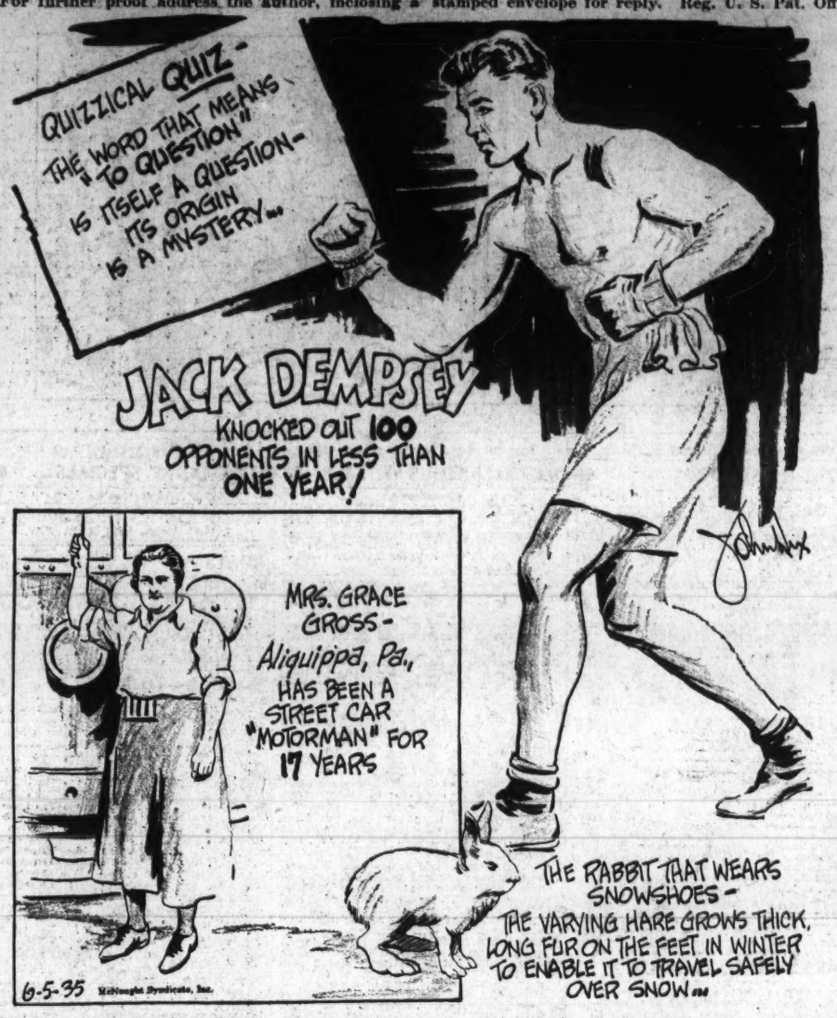
In Case of Death Call
Chambers

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



Strange as it seems, Jack Dempsey was on the comeback trail when he set his record of 100 knockouts during a tour that lasted just five days less than a year. During that time he was engaged in 175 bouts, taking on sometimes three or four opponents in one night. He knocked out more than 100 of them—but when King Levinsky won a decision over him in the fall of 1932, Jack decided that his fighting days were over.

Strange as it seems, the word "quiz" meaning "to question" is something of a question itself. Nobody knows how or why it came into the language, but the most likely explanation is that in Dublin a theater manager named Daly wagered that he could introduce a new word into the language overnight—a word without meaning.

He hired a group of men to go about the city, writing the word "quiz" on doorsteps throughout the night. Next morning the people of Dublin awoke to be confronted with a new word, and one which they could not define. The very mystery of the word gave to it its present meaning—"an odd-looking thing, a hoax, a jest"—and, as a verb "to quiz" came to mean "to question" especially the act of questioning a class by its teacher. Hence, in this country, a quiz often means a written or oral examination in school.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading on the stock exchange today was inactive. Interest payments caused an improvement in gilt-edged securities, home rails, industrials and oils, but speculative issues eased due to lack of support. The closing tone was quiet.

Paris—Stocks recovered part of the losses sustained in yesterday's decline on the Bourse. Oil, bank and rubber shares were the leaders in today's advance and the market closed firm.

Berlin—Electric issues led the improvement on the Boerse and the close was firmer despite business being dull.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, June 4 (AP).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture)—Scattered sales were closed from the Boston wool market and transactions involved mostly small lots, although a few sales were of sizable volume. Prices appeared about steady and some sales closed fully firm compared with the recent absent trade. A sizable volume of average to good French combing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags were sold this week at 70@72 cents scoured basis.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Elmer Twitchell on Those Horse and Buggy Days.

We don't want the "horse and buggy days" back, but a lot can be said for 'em, including the fact they were more horse than "buggy."

* * * *

Nobody expected a Federal Administration to feed the horse or asked the Government to grease the carriage.

* * * *

A buggy whip dealer didn't have to hire a lawyer to keep out of jail.

* * * *

The fellow back in the horse and buggy era regarded a contract as a contract, a mortgage deed as a mortgage deed and an agreement as an agreement.

* * * *

Few of the neighbors ever though that because old Maj. Puddicombe had a spanking team of bays on his big place over on the hill, there should be a redistribution of horses.

* * * *

Walking to work and taking the family on an outing once a week by trolley didn't strike anybody as hardships that ought to bring on an immediate revolution.

* * * *

If you had borrowed money to build or buy yourself a house, nobody squawked that it was a Government matter when it became hard to meet the interest payments.

* * * *

When somebody mentioned the "broader life" nobody in the congregation assumed it meant something that could be supplied by Washington.

* * * *

The "expert economist" blight hadn't set in and the nearest approach to that type of bug could always be eradicated by spraying the bushes.

* * * *

Professors were always found in college and never reported lost in the White House.

* * * *

The average business man didn't need an emblem in the front window to convince his customers that he was on the level and would keep a pledge.

* * * *

A "chiseler" was always a carpenter.

* * * *

There was a general disposition to abide by an umpire's decision.

* * * *

A horse and buggy ride wasn't called a HABR.

* * * *

You could be taken for a ride in those days, too, of course, but it was hard to get so far from your base in such a short time.

* * * *

The question of how to kill a chicken never was allowed to become a Federal problem.

* * * *

And when you wanted potpie you never pulled a chicken out of a crate, anyhow.

That Explains It.

What really happened was that in the chicken case the blue eagle forgot to duck.

Babe Ruth has quit baseball, one of his reasons being a refusal of the Boston owner to allow him to attend the reception on board the Normandie. In the old days they would have brought the Normandie to Ruth.

Home! Ha, after what I've been through, even trudging up these steep stairs is a treat.
I hear music... laughs. As usual, when we expect a good night's rest, some of the neighbors are throwing a party. Hear it?
Yes, someone is raising a hullabaloo, but even that is better than the big gobs of silence we got on that dippy island.
Tell me! I'll warn whoever is throwing that party to-

Lead-Directing Double.

MOST players are familiar with the bidding conventions in use among expert players. There are a number of conventions in the play of the cards which are equally important. In some cases these are so closely tied up with the bidding that it is difficult to say whether they are conventions of bidding or of play.

Among the most frequently used bidding signals is the double of a three notrump contract. This has a special meaning when your partner has bid a suit and you later double an opponent's bid of three notrump. If it is your partner's turn to make the opening lead, the double tells him he should open the suit he has bid. Here is how this convention works:

South Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 9 8 7 5 ♡ A 10 9 8 4 ◇ 7 4 ♣ K 2
♠ Q J 10 6 ♡ 7 2 ◇ A 9 8 5 2 ♣ Q 6	N W E S	♠ 3 2 ♡ Q J 6 ◇ J 10 3 ♣ 10 8 7 5 4
	♠ A K 4 ♡ K 5 3 ◇ K Q 6 ♣ A J 9 3

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♣(1)	1♢(2)	1♡(3)	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Dbl.(4)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—On this type of hand one notrump is a better opening bid in order to show the 4-3-3-3 distribution and the unusual honor-trick content of the hand.

2—This overcall has little to recommend it, even when not vulnerable.

3—This is a minimum hand on which a bid can be made over an intervening overbid. Without 1½ honor-tricks it is better to pass.

4—This double is a most unusual bid and seems strange when one looks at East's terrible bust. East had reasons for his double, however, which in this case proved to be well justified. He knew the club suit could not readily be run because he had so many. And since neither opponent had bid spades, he assumed the strength in that suit was probably well divided with a good share of it being in West's hand. Knowing declarer could set up neither clubs nor spades, it was obvious that the heart suit would have to be tackled and in this suit East had a stopper. If West happened to open spades, East's stopper in hearts would give him the lead too late to establish the diamonds, but if West opened diamonds there was a possibility that the suit could be established immediately and produce the winning tricks after East later got in.

The Play.

Obediently, West opened the five of diamonds and East played the ten. South, who had also recognized the entire situation, sought to shut West out of the lead by playing low and letting East win the first trick. This would have been successful if West had had a six-card diamond suit, but since East had three of them, it failed.

After East won the first trick he returned the Jack of diamonds. South played the King and West kept communications open by refusing to win with his Ace. He played the deuce of diamonds, showing his five-card suit and making it possible for East to retain a diamond which could be led after the suit had been established. There was little more of interest to the play of the hand. In establishing the heart suit, South was forced to lose a trick to the Queen. East then led his three of diamonds and West cashed the third, fourth and fifth tricks. Three notrump was down one.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

WJSV will put on a three-way broadcast tonight at 8 o'clock. Two lines run to the beds of Buck Newsom, pitcher of the Washington baseball team, and Arthur Godfrey, ace announcer; the third participant is Arch McDonald, sports commentator.

Another of WJSV's "special events" tomorrow will occur at 10:05 p. m., when 45 picked traffic patrol boys of Detroit go on the air in a round-table discussion of traffic situations, what they think of the Washington Monument, etc.

News of the Eddy Duchin contest: First audition will be held at WRC, 7 p. m., for some 30 contestants who will receive special delivery letters today. Other auditions will be held later in the week.

The letters were promising, and indicative of considerable talent in the offing. If yours isn't in send it right away, giving your name, age, sex, vocal experience and training, and the reasons why you think you can sing Eddy Duchin's type of music. Address WRC.

Judges include the four radio editors of Washington newspapers, and Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, District chairman of the Federation of Music Clubs. Duchin will help judge the final audition.

To marry or not to marry—that's the problem of one radio program. Without mentioning names, one sponsor wants to know whether a marriage of the two principal characters would detract from the interest of the show, and if so, what could be done to keep interest up? They are in a bad fix, and want suggestions.

Two shows from N. B. C. stations yesterday. Gen. Johnson went on at the last minute with a talk on NRA, and at 4:15 p. m., WMAL, two good-will ambassadors, aged 14 and 15, were interviewed by Ted Kimball. Roger Echegut, representing the boys of France on the Normandie trip, and Peter Dudan, of the New York Boys' Clubs, sent messages to the children of America. Peter will accompany Roger when he returns to France.

Grand Old Depression.

What is your impression,
Of this continued depression?
Has it made you think,
How you will get what you eat or drink?

How your neighbor exists over yonder?

Why can we not do it now?
